Bomber Flies Round World Nonstop in 94 Hrs. 1 Min

Post Reporter

Carswell Air Force Base, Fort Worth, Tex., March 2. An Irish-American captain and his crew of 13 men flew into this base at 10:22 a. m. (EST) today to complete the first nonstop flight round the world.

They covered an estimated 23,452 statute miles in 94 hours and 1 minute—120 seconds ahead of schedule. They did the job in an Air Force B-50 "medium" bomber, a modified version of the B-29 Superfortress, famous for its wartime atomic bombing.

Unofficially, they averaged 249 miles an hour.

The silvery, four-engine plane, Lucky Lady II, was piloted by Capt. James Gallagher, 28, of Melrose, Minn., and Washington, D. C. The flight, which originated here at 12:21 p. m. (EST) Saturday, was a sample of what the Air Force calls its "continuing program of in-flight refueling training flights to be sent to all parts of the world."

Fueled by B-29 'Tankers'

The record-making and record-breaking B-50 took on fuel from B-29 "tanker" planes while in flight at four points during its journey—the Azores; Dhahran, Saudi Arabia; the Philippine Islands, and Hawaii.

The flight was a top secret until today.

Reporters, photographers, radio and television men were not told of the mission until they were in flight thmselves on three special planes that left National Airport at Washington at 11:55 p. m. yesterday for this base.

Lieut. Gen. Curtis LeMay, head of the Strategic Air Command, declared the feat is merely an indication of things to come in Air Force achievement.

Asked if this means the Air Force can deliver an atomic bomb to any place in the world, he replied:

"Let's say any place that would require an atomic bomb."

Tankers Are Only Limit

He said the only limit on "mass flights" of the same sort "seems to be the number of tanker planes available.

LeMay said part of the plan was "to see if we could do something without columnists and other people finding out about it."

"It was successful in this particular case," he added.

The Air Force "certainly will make other long-range flights to perfect our technique," LeMay said.

Woman, 104, Dies of Burns As Dress Ignites

An aged woman—104 years old, according to Emergency Hospital officials—was fatally burned yesterday in her furnished room when her dress caught fire.

The fire victim was Mrs. Margaret Powell, of 1340 8th st. nw. Police said her dress was ignited when she moved against an electric cooker.

Mrs. Powell was taken to Emergency Hospital shortly after 1 p. m. with second and third degree burns covering 80 per cent of her body. She died three hours later.

Another roomer at the address, Thomas Harper, 80, tried to extinguish the flames and both of his hands were severely burned. He was released after treatment at the hospital.

School-Age VD Cases Drop From 2594 to 2357 in Year

(Table on Page 11.)

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Venereal disease infections uncovered last year among District children of grade and high school ages totaled 2357 cases, it was disclosed yesterday.

The number compares with an even higher total of 2594 cases similarly recorded in 1947 by the District Health Department.

No comparable statistics are available for prior years, said Dr. S. Ross Taggart, chief of the department's venereal disease bureau, who released the figures.

Dr. Taggart discounted what he termed "any general thought" that the VD incidence in District schools is rising because of the quick cures effected at rapid-treatment centers.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, recently told members of the House Appropriations Committee it was his "impression" that VD infections in the public schools "reflect the conduct of the pupils."

"There seems to be—that is our impression—much more (sex) experimentation; much less restraint," Dr. Ruhland had testified.

For the calendar year of 1947, Dr. Taggart reported, the VD control division recorded 157 previously unreported cases of gonorrhea and 22 of syphilis among children under 15 years of age here. In 1948, the totals were: gonorrhea, 164, and syphilis, 15.

Preponderance of newly reported cases, however, was in the 15-to-19-year age group. Here the division records showed 1909 gonorrhea infections and 226 new cases of syphilis during 1947, compared to 1792 with gonorrhea and 170 with syphilis uncovered last year.

The 1947 admissions for gonorrhea included 3 white boys and 5 white girls under 15 years of age, and 36 Negro boys and 113 Negro girls for the same age group. Admissions for primary and secondary syphilis that year for the under-15 age group included 6 boys and 16 girls, all Negroes.

In the 15-19 age group for 1947, gonorrhea cases reported included 22 white males and 61 white females, and 1059 Negro males and 767 Negro females. Corresponding tables released yesterday showed no race breakdown for 1948, but by sex the gonorrhea cases reported included 1025 males and 767 females.

Statistics for 1948 on admissions for syphilis showed, in the 15-19-year age group, that reported cases included 4 white males and 8 white females, and 50 Negro males and 108 Negro females.

The infections, said Dr. Taggart, are discovered during school physical examinations or are reported voluntarily by the students or their parents at the District's rapid treatment centers. In the case of the younger pupils, he said, many are reported by the maternal and child welfare organizations.

Cloture Test On Filibuster Is Postponed

Petition to End Debate Will Be Circulated Monday, Lucas Says

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senate Administration leaders last night postponed a scheduled showdown on the three-day Southern filibuster in a tactical maneuver for more cloture votes.

Southern Senators, claiming a marginal edge for the time being in their fight to save filibusters, said leaders delayed the cloture test to avoid a licking.

But Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) said the Senate will decide that next week.

He said a cloture petition will be circulated Monday, putting up to Vice President Alben W. Barkley the question of whether the Senate can shut off debate on a motion to call up a permanent antifilibuster rule.

GOP to Hold Whip Hand

If Barkley rules two thirds of the Senate can shut off the debate, the Southerners will appeal to the Senate.

The showdown will come when the Senate votes on Barkley's ruling, with Republicans apparently holding the whip hand.

If more than half of the Republicans vote with Southerners, which GOP leaders say is a possibility, the Administration could lose the test and the filibuster would continue indefinitely.

For more than an hour yesterday the Senate Republican Policy Committee discussed what to do about the filibuster as a party, without any conclusions.

Vote as Each Wants

In the end, GOP Policy Chairman Robert A. Taft (Ohio) told newsmen it wasn't "a policy matter" and individual Republicans will vote their own convictions.

"Rules are rules, and people have their own opinions about what they mean," said Taft. "I don't see how you could ask them to vote against their convictions even if you wanted to."

Taft said a poll will be made to see how Republicans would vote on the Barkley ruling and two thirds and majority vote cloture. He declined to say how he personally will vote.

Three Southern Senators meanwhile held the floor from 2:16 p. m. until the Senate recessed at 6:06 p. m., including time out for quorum calls and interruptions.

Big Expansion Plan Revealed By Woodward

Store Gets 9-Million Improvement Loan; 2 Branches in View

By S. Oliver Goodman
Post Reporter

Woodward & Lothrop plans a multi-million-dollar expansion and modernization program, President Andrew Parker revealed last night.

Parker

To finance the program, the Washington department store has obtained a nine-million-dollar loan from the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. The loan will run for 20 years and bear an interest rate of 3½ per cent.

About $3,625,000 will be used to retire a long-term bank loan made in 1947 in connection with the purchase of the Palais Royal store, now known as Woodward's North building.

The remainder of the new funds, Parker said, will be used for additional working capital and:

1. Major redecoration and modernization work in the Main building at 11th and F sts. nw. and the North building at 11th and G sts. nw. Part of this work already has been started and much more is contemplated over the next two years.

2. Erection of a branch store in Maryland, at the northwest corner of Wisconsin and Western aves. Construction is expected to start "within a few months" and company officials hope to open for business some time in 1950. A second branch store in nearby Virginia is planned "in due course," Parker said.

From an unofficial source, The Washington Post learned that Woodward's will spend about three million dollars on the Maryland branch store and $1,500,000 on improvements to the Main and North buildings.

In a letter to stockholders, Parker stated:

"Besides providing the capital required for physical improvement and operations, the consolidated loan materially improves the financial position of . . . company from a banking-credit standpoint and should provide added financial stability for a number of years to come. It is the considered opinion of the directors and officers that this program will produce ad-

2 U. S. Reds Pledge Aid to Soviet in War

Foster and Dennis Say They'll Fight 'Imperialism,' Back European Leaders

(From Press Dispatches)

New York, March 2.—Top American Communist leaders today joined their French, British and Italian counterparts by declaring that in event of war between the United States and Russia, the United States Communist Party would try to "defeat the predatory war aims of American imperialism."

The statement, issued at Communist headquarters here by National Chairman William Z. Foster and General Secretary Eugene Dennis, followed the pattern of pro-Soviet pronouncements made recently by French Communist leader Maurice Thorez and Italian leader Palmiro Togliatti.

Earlier this week, British Communist leader Harry Pollitt declared Britain's Reds would side with Russia in any third world war.

The Thorez and Togliatti statements called upon the French and Italians to cooperate with the Soviet army should the Russians invade France or Italy in event of "capitalist aggression." Both Thorez and Togliatti have been censured by the anti-Communist governments of the two countries for their statements.

Say War Isn't Inevitable

The United States Communists' statement declared they would "cooperate with all democratic forces to defeat the predatory war aims of American imperialism and bring such a war to a speedy conclusion on the basis of a democratic peace."

Communists refer to Communist-led states, including Russia, as "people's democracies."

Dennis and Foster said they did not regard war as inevitable. They said they believed the Russian and American systems could exist separately and peaceably, but that if "Wall Street" should plunge the United States into war, the Communists would oppose it as unjust and aggressive and "destructive of the deepest interests of the American people and all humanity."

Neither Foster nor Dennis appeared in person. Dennis now is being tried for conspiracy to advocate and teach the overthrow of the United States Government by force. Foster, along with Dennis and 10 other members of the Communist national board, was to be tried on the same charge but he was excused, at least temporarily, because of a serious heart ailment.

Support Statements Abroad

The Communist leaders said they had been asked for comment on the American Communist attitude following the statements by Thorez and Togliatti. They said those statements "emphatically serve the cause of universal peace."

"Only those who plot a third world war and seek to embroil France and Italy in aggressive military operations against our great ally of Warld War II, the Soviet Union, could read anything un-French or un-Italian in those statements."

They said the Marshall Plan and the Atlantic pact threatened peace and that while an invasion of the United States was improbable, there was a war threat from "cartel-connected trusts" which seek to stampede America and the world into an atomic war.

"American security and American peace lie in world security and world peace—not in any 'Wall

House Passes $98,923,621 D. C. Budget

Proposal to Add Rights Amendment To Bill Defeated By 106-to-64 Vote

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

The House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate the $98,923,621 District budget bill after overriding, 106 to 64, a proposal to write a civil rights amendment into the measure.

Passage came by a voice vote right after another voice vote had headed off an attempt to get a roll call test on the District civil rights question.

In another test, the House voted, 38 to 29, against the appeal of Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.) to erase from the bill a requirement that out-of-town students pay tuition in District public schools. His appeal was backed by Representatives Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) and John E. Rankin (D., Miss.), and was opposed by Representative Sidney R. Yates (D., Ill.), member of the subcommittee that drafted the bill.

Horan Voices Doubt

Representative Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.), chairman, and Representative Ralph E. Church (R., Ill.) of the subcommittee that prepared the bill steered it to House approval without a single change.

Representative Walt Horan (R., Wash.), however, as former chairman of the group, questioned whether it carried adequate police, school, sewer, and other funds, and voiced hope any "weaknesses" would be corrected later in conference after the bill clears the Senate.

Sharp House talk on District civil rights reflected the tense Senate mood in its third day of approach to the question of the future of filibusters, traditional weapon for killing civil rights legislation.

In the budget debate, House members gave a preview of the fight that is to come there on the sales tax, now being readied for congressional action by joint District revenue-raising subcommittees. These groups, meeting yesterday, turned over to Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West instruction for making a final draft of a sales tax bill, which Chairman Smith of the House group said will probably be introduced next week.

Say Tax Is Needed

Both Horan and Church told the House the sales tax is needed. Said Church: "The only fair, just and sound way to raise the needed revenue is the sales tax."

Representative Stephen M. Young (D., Ohio) retorted that the sales tax was "the most atrocious of all taxes and the one which weighs heaviest on the poorest people." He said a 3-per-cent Ohio sales tax adopted as an emergency measure has become "a permanent cancerous growth."

Young then turned to the civil rights issue with a protest that two Negroes from his State had recently been denied admission to a downtown Washington theater.

Representative Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.) next called for strik-

Credit Controls Eased On Installment Buying; 21-Month Limit Fixed

By Hoover Commission

Widespread Changes Urged In Veterans Administration

Widespread changes in the Veterans' Administration were recommended by the Herbert Hoover Commission for Reorganization of the Government yesterday.

The proposals included:

1. That all insurance matters should be incorporated into a veterans' life insurance corporation.

2. That administration of pensions, retirement benefits, disability compensation and guardianships be consolidated in a veterans' benefit service.

3. That a readjustment service be set up to handle all vocational rehabilitation, education and readjustment allowance programs, and certification of veterans for loan guarantees.

4. That the executive assistant administrator be called "Deputy Administrator"; that "three or more" assistant administrators be named; that all management services be combined under an "Assistant Administrator for Administration Services."

5. That the agency head have authority to "organize and control" his agency, and that "independent authority to subordinates be eliminated."

6. That the present inspection and investigation research and the coordination service become an "Office of Management Research" under an assistant administrator.

7. That the office of legislation and the general counsel be combined.

8. That all directives from the central office be promulgated by the Administrator.

The changes were recommended to overcome six defects:

1. Conflicting lines of authority between Washington officials and officials in the field "which result in divided responsibility."

2. Too many organizational units.

Down Payments Of One-Third Still Required on Autos By Reserve Board

The Federal Reserve Board yesterday eased its controls on installment buying so as to give purchasers more time to pay for automobiles and other products.

Beginning Monday, a purchaser will have 21 months to pay off whatever he owes after the initial cash payment.

At present the time limit is 18 months when the credit amount is more than $1000, or 15 months when it is less.

Purchasers of new automobiles still will have to make a down payment of one third of the cost price.

Other Down Payments Cut

The down payment for other products under credit controls will be reduced from the present 20 per cent to 15 per cent.

Yesterday's order came after it was disclosed that President Truman has been holding night conferences in Blair House with business, labor, farm and Government leaders to keep himself abreast of the economic situation.

And it followed a statement by Leon Keyserling, a member of Mr. Truman's Council of Economic Advisers, that "business conditions are still very good, bright and promising." He said after a meeting with the President that January and February retail sales were up to the levels of the same two months last year.

The announcement of the Federal Reserve Board that it was relaxing credit controls came after a report by the board earlier yesterday that the amount of installment credit outstanding had dropped in January for the first time in three years.

"Automobile sale credit . . . increased at a less rapid rate in January than in other recent months," the board reported.

The Federal Reserve Board had been under mounting pressure to ease the controls on installment buying. Automobile dealers were complaining that the controls were slowing up sales of cars and forcing many prospective buyers out of the market.

Kaiser Not Satisfied

Edgar F. Kaiser, vice president and general manager of the Kaiser-Frazer Co., was not altogether satisfied with yesterday's announcement by the board. He said his firm wanted a minimum of 24 months in which its customers could finish paying for their cars and "we needed 30 months."

"This 21 months is not enough," Kaiser said, "but it may help some."

He said the board's figures lag about two months behind and it will not have February sales figures until April. He urged the board to "watch this thing very closely."

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) chairman of the Joint Congressional Economic Committee, commended the Federal Reserve Board for "a clear illustration of the wise exercise of Government controls." He said the action means that industry has caught up with postwar demand in many lines.

Senator Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, recalled that during recent hearings his committee had asked the board what it

Blockaded Russian Unit Begs Water

U. S. Denies Appeals Of Officials Told To Leave Germany

Frankfurt, Germany, March 2 (AP).—A plea for water came tonight from the Russian Repatriation Mission, blockaded here by United States military police because it rejected Gen. Lucius D. Clay's order to leave.

In Berlin, Soviet Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky denounced the blockade as "shameless police operations."

He did not disclose whether the eight-man repatriation mission would be ordered to leave Frankfurt.

The plea for water was made when a Soviet colonel, not a member of the mission, was allowed to visit the besieged mission headquarters with Col. Sterling Wood, Frankfurt provost marshal, and an American interpreter.

Asked whether the Russian plea for water would be granted, Wood told reporters:

"My orders were that the water be shut off. They have not been changed."

Wood said the mission members were sitting together, singing Russian folk songs, when the party entered. He said no new proposals were advanced by either side.

The visiting Russian colonel's last words to Wood, as they parted outside the building were:

"I wish to remind you again of our request for water."

Then he shook hands with Wood and saluted smartly.

The Red flag of the Soviet Union flew over the headquarters. The Russian government has denounced Clay's order for withdrawal of the mission as a violation of Yalta and Potsdam agreements. Clay asked it to get out of the United States zone by March 1 on grounds there was little for it to do.

In addition to utilities, food deliveries were cut off today. Military police, armed with rifles, patroled the snow-covered grounds of the three-story yellow stucco building in the center of Frankfurt's American community.

Their orders were to seal off the Russians—four officers and four enlisted men—from outside contacts. They did.

German servants working in the vicinity said the Russians had stocked their building heavily with food in the past few days.

The mission members, headed by Col. Vasily L. Argoonov, said yesterday they would be classed as deserters if they left their post without orders.

Johnson Due For Forrestal Job, Is Report

Announcement Said To Be Imminent; No Surprise at Pentagon

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman has decided to name Louis A. Johnson as Secretary of Defense to succeed James Forrestal, it was reported last night.

An announcement to this effect is imminent, it was said in usually well informed quarters. The report caused no surprise among Secretary Forrestal's associates in the Pentagon. They said they had long expected him to retire from Government service, and added that there were plenty of indications that Johnson would be the new Secretary of Defense.

The only question in their minds was when the shift would take place. They had been under the impression that Forrestal would stay on until May or thereabouts.

Forrestal, at 57, is the dean of the Cabinet and the only remaining holdover from the Roosevelt days. He was Secretary of the Navy from May, 1944, until July, 1947.

Johnson, 58, has loomed as a possible successor to Forrestal ever since President Truman's triumph at the polls November 2. In the 1948 campaign, Johnson was chairman of the finance committee of the Democratic National Committee which raised $1,500,000.

A well-to-do West Virginia lawyer and businessman, Johnson was Assistant Secretary of War from June 28, 1937, to July 25, 1940. As such, he was in charge of industrial mobilization.

Radiator Firm Cuts Prices on Home Supplies

New York, March 2 (AP).—American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corp. has cut prices on a large number of its heating lines.

Trade circles viewed the reductions as one of the most important contributions toward lower home-building costs since the war.

American Radiator applied the cuts to large numbers of its boilers and furnaces for home heating and also to a number of its plumbing fixtures.

The company said reductions, averaging about 5 per cent, applied to a large section of the company's boilers for home steam and hot water heating. Cuts ranging between 2 and 20 per cent affected several lines of furnace equipment.

Child Follows Immutable Law In Development, Gesell Says

By Ben Bradlee
Post Reporter

Child behavior is governed by laws as immutable as those of nuclear physics, Dr. Arnold Gesell, founder and director for 30 years of the Clinic of Child Development at Yale University, told a capacity crowd last night.

Dr. Gesell

Speaking in McMahon Hall, Catholic University, under the auspices of Sigma Xi, scientific research society of America, Dr. Gesell urged more than 1000 mothers present to recognize and understand the growth of the child, as a key to understanding its behavior.

When more than 500 persons were unable to squeeze into the hall to hear Gesell, the doctor consented to deliver a second talk on the same subject, at the conclusion of his first lecture.

Dr. Gesell outlined briefly 34 stages of child growth and development that had been recorded at the Yale Clinic. These stages covered the period from seven months before birth to the age of 10 years.

Recognition by parents of the growth stages, Dr. Gesell, will bring understanding of the problems of the child.

By studying thousands of children at his clinic "none of whom have ever been physically punished," Dr. Gesell has been able to describe scientifically certain functions that children of certain ages will perform.

For instance, Dr. Gesell said, a child of 6 weeks will close his palm over a small cube. A little later he will inspect the object in his hand, then hold it with both hands, then transfer it from one hand to the other, then release it consciously.

At the age of 6 months, he will pick it up crudely. At the age of 1 year, he will pick it up neatly with his finger tips. Occasionally, Dr. Gesell, said, a particularly refined infant at this stage will pick the cube up with the little finger of his hand extended in the manner of the tea-drinker.

At the age of 18 months, the child will be piling cubes on top of each other. At two years he is building walls, at three years he will build a bridge out of the cubes, at four a gateway, and at five a stairway.

These child abilities are pre-

Tale of Poverty Frees Cripple In Embezzlement of $13,900

A heart-rending story of poverty and physical handicap led yesterday to the freeing of a cripple who admitted he embezzled $13,900 in public funds. He was placed on indefinite probation.

The sobs of Charles W. Embrey, 31, of Rockville, echoed through Montgomery County Circuit Court as he related how he was lured on by a greedy and "very, very attractive" fiancee—the first girl friend he ever had in his life.

His story of buying clothes for his 12 brothers and sisters "so the other kids would cut out their catty remarks about the clothes they wore" was corroborated by a sister.

Pretty Mary Jane Embrey, 17, a student at Richard Montgomery High in Rockville, wept softly on the witness stand as she recalled how "Charlie never had much for himself; he always thought of us first.

"Everything they wanted that was in my power to give them, I gave them," Embrey, an infantile paralysis victim, told Chief Judge Charles W. Woodward who heard the case without a jury because Embrey had thrown himself on the mercy of the court.

Under questioning by his attorney, James R. Miller, of Rockville, who donated his services, the former cashier for the Montgomery Liquor Control Board, in Silver Spring, told how he embezzled the money over a three-year period before his arrest last November 20.

Virginia Orders Realty Owners To Stop Raw Sewage Pollution

Virginia's Water Control Board yesterday ordered "every owner" discharging raw sewage into the waters of the State to proceed immediately with pollution abatement programs.

While the regulation specifies "every owner," it is aimed particularly at municipalities and will affect Arlington and Fairfax Counties and Alexandria.

Actually, the new regulation does not go beyond the original Virginia Water Control Act which requires pollution abatement programs.

However, it will require "every owner" to file on May 1 and every 90 days thereafter a report on progress made on pollution abatement programs with the State Water Control Board.

"It will automatically give the board a running report on what progress is being made," Alf H. Paessler, board secretary, said in Richmond.

The regulation becomes effective April 1. It applies only to raw sewage and not to wastes that are primarily industrial in character.

In this area it will affect the three Virginia communities which together empty about 12,500,000 gallons of raw sewage each day into the Potomac River or its tributaries.

Paessler said he was not certain but he presumed Virginia would have authority over sewage emptied into the Potomac by Virgini-

Spellman to Defy Strikers and Aid In Burying Dead

New York, March 2. (U.P.)—Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, announced tonight that he is going to Calvary Cemetery tomorrow and help bury the 700 bodies that have accumulated there during a seven-week strike of grave diggers.

He said he would take 100 seminary students with him. Another group of students will be sent to Gate of Heaven Cemetery in Westchester County, also strikebound.

He said the strike by the United Cemetery Workers (CIO) was Communist inspired and an immoral affront to the church.

Calvary, one of the largest cemeteries in the country, is the scene of 50 to 60 funerals every day, and the cardinal said the situation there is getting critical.

The union has struck for higher wages and walked out after two negotiating sessions, Spellman said. He offered to arbitrate the issue, he said, but was refused.

Italy Is Debated As Pact Member

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Major sections of the Atlantic Security Pact are now in final form, it was disclosed yesterday, but negotiators are debating whether to include Italy in the treaty.

Secretary of State Acheson said another meeting would be held today with representatives of Great Britain, Canada, France, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands.

An additional meeting may be held early next week, Acheson said. There were indications that if the question of Italy's participation is decided by then, that will be the last meeting required to draft the mutual assistance pact.

Principal objection to including Italy in the treaty is reported to come from senior members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Connally Reported Opposed

Committee Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) is reported to feel that it would be going too far afield to bring Italy into an "Atlantic" agreement. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) believes that inasmuch as Italy is not a member of the United Nations, she should not be brought into a treaty based on Article 51 of the United Nation's Charter, authorizing regional agreements by members.

France is said to be highly in favor of Italy's joining the pact, and the other European nations, although not seeking Italy's participation, are believed to be willing to go along with the State Department's desires.

The State Department's position is compounded by the fact that before Acheson became Secretary of State, it was indicated to Italy that a request to join in the treaty discussions would be entertained. Italy, highly eager to join in, might be placed in an embarrassing position, weakening her government's stand against the Communist Party, if she is now rebuffed.

To open the treaty to Italy—in addition to other nations that border on the Atlantic and may come into the pact—would spread over a wide area the expected military aid extended by America to support the agreement. This, in turn, would reduce individual aid to the negotiating countries and might also open the way for Turkey and Greece to seek to join.

The National Defense Establishment, however, believes that the broader the pact the stronger its "teeth" will be, permitting greater defense planning.

Approval Expected Soon

Norway is soon expected to give parliamentary approval of its participation in the pact, and a news dispatch from Denmark yesterday predicted that officials there may decide today to join the treaty talks. Portugal and Iceland may come into the pact later.

Secretary Acheson said that the leading members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee are being kept fully informed of the negotiations and have made several good suggestions. He expressed the hope that before the treaty is actually signed it can be disclosed for public reaction.

One of the points yet to be determined in the treaty itself is whether it should contain a preamble setting out broad humanistic aims, in the form of the United Nations Charter's preamble, or contain only normal legalistic treaty language. Several forms of such a preamble are under discussion.

Wright-Patterson Air Force Base March 2.—The Air Force's jet bombers and fighters are going to burn high octane gasoline instead of kerosene in the future.

Officials of USAF Air Materiel Command here say that JP-1—the special kerosene used in jet aircraft today—gives slightly better performance than gasoline, but that the latter has certain distinct advantages.

First, it will greatly simplify logistics, in that only one general type of fuel be ordered, stored, shipped overseas, etc.

Second, the Air Force plans to step up the speed and take-off capacity of its globe-ranging Consolidated B-36 bomber by installing jet engines in addition to its present six-piston engines. Carrying two types of fuel would complicate missions.

Vast Octane Capacity

Third, there is already a vast capacity in the United States for the manufacture of high octane gas, due to the great expansion of cracking plants during World War II.

Fourth, contrary to popular opinion, high octane is cheaper than the specially refined kerosene now burned in jet aircraft.

It is not expected that there will be an abrupt shift from one type of fuel to another, but rather a gradual conversion. The new General Electric J-47 jet engine, which powers the F-86 fighter—world speed record holder—and B-45 bomber, is designed to burn either fuel.

The J-47 is expected to replace GE's J-35 engine in the B-47 bomber and be added to the B-36 to enable it to take off with greater loads and step up its top speed for short periods while under attack.

Jet Takes 6 Times the Fuel

The high rate of fuel consumption of jet planes is a major problem today of the men who plan and design our military aircraft and their power plants. One B-45 jet bomber burns up fuel about six times as fast as a B-29 piston bomber.

Air Materiel Command experts, however, report very encouraging progress on this score in the past year, with specific fuel consumption down as much as 35 per cent.

Much of the research and development under way here also is aimed at these ends: (1) Improving the performance of planes at high altitudes; (2) "Miniaturization" of instruments and equipment to reduce the weight and space occupied, particularly on jet aircraft; (3) Streamlining planes to boost their performance; (4) Overcoming the many problems of Arctic operations.

One essential of high-altitude operations is oxygen for air crewmen and the Air Medical Laboratory here has successfully tested the use of liquid oxygen with a converter in place of oxygen tanks.

Space, Weight Saved

Officials say the liquid oxygen and a newly designed converter occupies only 20 per cent of the space and weighs only as much as the tanks and yet provides 44 per cent more oxygen.

Great progress has been made in building miniature radio parts and other apparatus with performance equal to those now in use. A "handy-talkie" transmitter-receiver has been designed which is about the size of a camera. Weighing less than five pounds, it may replace the "Gibson Girl" carried on rubber liferafts during the war.

The Air Force is ready to strip all the protruding radio antennas from planes as soon as funds are available. Replacing them will be antennas built inside the wings and fuselage. Use of fiber glass in place of metal on wing tips and fuselage will provide electric windows" for the antenna.

A new electric flight suit has been successfully tested. The wearer kept comfortable for four hours at minus-42 Fahrenheit temperatures. Boots and gloves, as well as the suit, are electrically heated.

Danes Reported Ready To Join Pact Talks

Copenhagen, Denmark, March 2 (AP).—Diplomatic informants tonight said Denmark may formally accept on Thursday an invitation to join talks on the projected North Atlantic Defense treaty.

The government's foreign relations committee met for two hours behind closed doors to hear Prime Minister Hans Hedtoft and Foreign Minister Gustave Rasmussen report on Denmark's situation.

The informants said the committee agreed in principle that Denmark should join the talks at the earliest possible moment.

Package Liquor Bill Sent to Kans. Governor

Topeka, Kans., March 2 (U.P.).—A bill to legalize liquor in Kansas, for 69 years a stronghold of prohibition, was passed by the Legislature today.

The act now needs only the signature of Republican Governor Frank Carlson. When the act becomes law, probably either Saturday or Monday, only Oklahoma will be dry.

The bill provides for sale of packaged liquor in privately-owned retail stores but no liquor by the drink.

Wife of Captain On World Flight Is D. C. Native

Captain Gallagher worked for the War Department here as a civilian before the war and is married to a Washington native, the former Mary Cranston.

The captain and his wife are both 28 years old and met while they worked in the office of the Surgeon General. Married about 2½ years, they have one daughter, 8-month-old Kathleen Anne.

Mrs. Gallagher is a graduate of Holy Comforter School and St. Cecilia's Academy here. She also studied at George Washington University.

She is the daughter of the late George F. Cranston, printer at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and Mrs. Loretta Cranston, Treasury Department clerk.

Captain Gallagher aand his wife had planned a vacation in New Orleans for the Mardi Gras. Then a "secret mission" came up. Mrs. Gallagher went to the high jinks of Rex in the Crescent City. Captain Gallagher went around the world.

Nelly Bly Took 72 Days To Circle Globe Back in 1899

Fort Worth, Tex., March 2 (AP).—Nelly Bly should see the way they go around the world now.

Back in 1899, it took her 72 days 6 hours and 11 minutes to girdle the globe by steamship and train.

On April 6, 1924, four Army planes took off from Seattle, headed around the world. Only two of the original planes finished the flight. It took 175 days, of which 14 days and 15 hours was actual flying time.

In 1929, the German dirigible Graf Zeppelin made the globe-circling trip in 20 days and 4 hours from Friedrichshafen to Friedrichshafen, the distance 21,700 miles.

The late Wiley Post made two trips. In 1931, with Harold Gatty as navigator, he flew a northern route of 15,474 miles in eight days 15 hours 51 minutes. In 1933, flying alone, he covered roughly the same route in 7 days 18 hours 49½ minutes.

Howard Hughes, airplane designer and former Hollywood producer, flew around by way of Russia, 14,824 miles, in three days, 19 hours 8 minutes 10 seconds in 1938.

In 1947, William Odom, with Milton Reynolds, the owner, flew a converted Air Force medium bomber over a 20,000-mile route in elapsed time of 78 hours, 55 minutes, 12 seconds.

Reporters Given 'Blind' Assignments on Flight

The Washington reporters who were sent Tuesday night to cover the Fort Worth arrival of the globe-girdling B-50 did not know the nature of their assignment when they left National Airport.

Air Force officials—when they urged editors to assign men to cover the event—declined to state where the reporters were going or on what mission. All they would say was that the reporters would return in 24 hours after covering something "significant and newsworthy."

The secrecy that cloaked the flight was just to prove it could be done secretly.

Ramey, commanding general of the Eighth Air Force, stationed here, and other notables were present for the landing.

The smiling, youthful, but visibly weary crew of 14 men emerged from Lucky Lady II at 10:42 a. m. The plane had flown over the operations tower at 10:22 and had touched the runway at 10:31 a. m. (EST).

"Shipshape All the Way"

Captain Gallagher said "everything worked out very well, not a bit of trouble, shipshape all the way."

His flight engineer, Capt. David B. Parmelee, Guilford, Conn., said the plane had about 1500 gallons of gasoline left.

Captain Gallagher said the most significant aspect of the mission was that 'it shows you can just go anywhere in the world at any time. No limit to the time you can stay aloft."

Gallagher said the weather was "very good" all the way. They flew only four hours with instruments, the "biggest part of it near the eWst Coast coming in," he said.

There was no difficulty refueling from B-29's standing by at designated points around the globe, he said. He estimated average ground speed at between 238 and 240 miles an hour, and said the plane's altitude ranged from sea level to 20,000 feet.

Work On Two Shifts

Gallagher said he didn't think any of his men were "real tired." They worked on two shifts with two complete crews, he said—from four to six hours on and four to six hours off.

One of two radio operators on the plane was Technical Sergt. Burgess G. Cantrell, 30, of Pound (Wise County), Va. He said he got "between 20 and 30 hours sleep" on the way and had "a fine trip."

The second pilot of the craft was First Lieut. Arthur M. Neal, of Visalia, Calif., who was the pilot of the B-29 Superfortress "Lucky Lady," one of three that started on a round-the-world training flight last July. His and another B-29 completed the flight, returning to Davis Monthan base, Tucson, Ariz., on August 6, 15 days after their departure.

Other crew members of the Lucky Lady II were Capt. James H. Morris, San Antonio, Tex., third pilot; Capt. Glenn E. Hacker, Eldorado, Kans., first navigator; First Lieut. Earl L. Rigor, Corvallis, Greg., second navigator; First Lieuts. Roland B. Bonner, Bakersfield, Calif., and William F. Caffrey, Boston, Mass., radar officers; Captain Parmelee, Staff Sergt. Robert G. Davis, Niles, Mich., and Tech. Sergt. Virgil L. Young, Cranesville, Pa., flight engineers; Tech. Sergt. Cantrell and Staff Sergt. Robert R. McLeroy, Alvarado, Tex., radio operators; Tech. Sergt. Melvin G. Davis, Long Beach, Calif., and Staff Sergt. Donald G. Traugh, jr., Danville, Pa., gunners.

Carried Guns, No Ammunition

Lucky Lady II is an operational aircraft and carried its normal complement of 12 50-caliber machine-guns. It did not carry ammunition of bombs. Bombbay fuel tanks were used to give an additional margin of safety.

General LeMay acknowledged that the Air Force's gigantic six-engined bomber, the B-36, could have accomplished the same mission.

"But to do its war mission tactically, the B-36 would require no refueling" he said.

Secretary Symington said tests already have shown the B-36 capable of flying at least 9600 miles with bomb load and armaments, landing with a 5 per cent fuel reserve for safety margin. During tests, he said, some engine trouble developed and bomb bay doors became stuck after bombs were dropped on the "target."

General Ramey disclosed that bad luck preceded the flight of Lucky Lady II. The flight was begun 24 hours earlier by another plane. It developed an internal engine fire, and was forced to land in the Azores.

Air Force officials here said refueling experiments from "tanker" planes began last summer. Its execution has become "routine," they said, and long-range flights of this nature require only "stock-in-trade" methods.

Hourly Reports Made

Hourly position reports were made to monitors, which relayed them to Eighth Air Force headquarters in Fort Worth.

The flight was made on a point-to-point plan. From Fort Worth the flight plan was filed only as far as Lagens Air Force base, Azores. When the plane passed over Lagens the coordinating officer stationed there in advance with refueling tankers filed a new plan to the next point, Dharan, Saudi Arabia.

Lucky Lady II arrived two hours and 34 minutes ahead of time over Dhahran; one hour and 25 minutes in advance of schedule over the Philippines, and 58 minutes ahead of time over the Hawaiian Islands.

Time required for refueling, altitude of the aircraft and quantity of gasoline transferred from B-29s to the B-50 are "classified" data, Air Force officials said.

The B-50's top speed approaches 400 miles an hour, and it can cruise at about 300 miles an hour. It has a wingspread of 191 feet and is 99 feet long. Its gross weight is 140,000 pounds.

Party Requests Saragat to Stay With Gasperi

Rome, March 2 (AP).—Italy escaped a treatened cabinet crisis today when the influential Labor Socialist Party (PSLI) agreed to continue its cooperation with the government.

The party's directors asked their leader, Giuseppe Saragat, to withdraw his resignation as vice premier in Premier Alcide de Gasperi's cabinet.

There will be a price for their support, the Labor Socialists said, but they did not yet demand it.

The Labor Socialists are the biggest of three moderate parties backing the De Gasperi cabinet.

Saragat resigned Saturday because extreme leftist malcontents within his own party had been criticizing the government for being too lenient with wartime facists. De Gasperi refused to accept the resignation.

2 More Frenchmen Held as Red Agents

'Potential Traitors'

Congressmen Aroused by Reds' Stand

By the United Press

Representative Francis Case (R., S. Dak.) said last night that the pro-Russian stand taken by leaders of the United States Communist Party would be "strictly treasonable" if the Nation were at war.

His assertion typified the angry reaction of both Republican and Democratic Congressmen to the statement of William Z. Foster and Eugene Dennis.

Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.) said the statement is "all the more reason to relentlessly expose all of the Communist traitors in our midst."

The Justice Department declined to comment.

Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) said: "In its significance if not in its intent it is obviously a statement of disloyalty."

Senator Richard Russell (D., Ga.): "It is a matter of great concern that the Nation has so many potential traitors."

Senator Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Neb.): "They are giving their allegiance to Stalin."

Senate Democratic Leader Scott Lucas, Ill.: "Like the Communists in France and Italy, they take their orders from the Kremlin."

Paris, March 2 (U.P.).—Police seized two more suspected Communist agents today and announced they are investigating 20 others in an effort to destroy a web of Communist espionage.

Minister of Interior Jules Moch, outspoken Communist foe, told the cabinet a total of eight have been arrested so far. He said the government is doing everything in its power to wipe out the threat to national security.

One of the new arrests was Paul Moret, who was chief of cabinet in the ministry of industrial production under Communist Marcel Paul two years ago.

Officials said he was suspected of having contact with Maj. Louis-Georges Teulery, one of the army officers in custody on charges of disclosing secrets to a representative of a "popular democracy," as the eastern European states call themselves.

Officials added that Moret also was suspected of having direct contact with a representative of an unnamed foreign power.

Police began rounding up possible Communist agents nearly a week ago after French Communist Chief Maurice Thorez proclaimed that in event of war French workers would welcome an invading Soviet army.

The second person arrested today was believed to be a civilian transferred to military jurisdiction by the Ministry of Interior, for possible trial on charges of disclosing defense secrets to a foreign power.

U. S. Reds Vow To Aid Soviet

Street uber alles' policy decked out in the trappings of 'the American century,'" they said.

"For our part, we will work with all those who seek peace, democracy and social progress. The American people, assuming their historic responsibility, must reject the war policies of the Wall Street-Churchill cartellists and their bipartisan puppets and return our Nation to the peace policies of Franklin D. Roosevelt, the 'grand design' and cornerstone of which is firm American-Soviet friendship."

'Me Too,' Declares Norwegian Red Leader

Oslo, Norway, March 2 (U.P.).—Communist Leader Emil Loevlien said today his party would join French and Italian Communists in regarding the Soviet army as "liberators." But he had a qualification.

He said statements by France's Maurice Thorez and Italy's Palmiro Togliatti had been misinterpreted. Thorez and Togliatti meant that Russian troops would be welcome in event those countries were "subjected to aggression."

"In this interpretation we join," Loevlien said.

18,000 Pro-Communists In Paris Vow Soviet Aid

Paris, March 2 (A.P.).—A crowd of 18,000 pro-Communists thunderously pledged itself tonight to greet Soviet troops as liberators if they ever arrive on French soil.

At a mass meeting Maurice Thorez and Jacques Duclos, leaders of the French Communist Party, repeated in a dozen different forms its current slogan:

"France will never fight the Soviet Union."

Japanese Communists Would Fight Any Invader

Tokyo, March 2 (A.P.).—Japan's top Communist said yesterday his Reds would "fight against whatever foreign nation which should invade our nation."

Kyuichi Tokuda, party secretary-general, made the statement to the Japanese press when asked whether Nippon's Reds shared the sentiments of Communists in France and Italy.

Soviet Fugitive Sees New War

Tokyo (Wednesday) March 3 (U.P.).—A former Red Army private, the second Soviet citizen in two days revealed to have fled to Japan seeking haven in American democracy, said today he believed Russia would start a new war in the near future.

He told a press conference here there had been two general movements of "additional" Russian troops to the Far East during the past year and revealed the movements had put Soviet units there above normal strength.

He was Innokentiy Zyrayanov, 24-year-old veteran of World War II. Allied headquarters revealed that Zyrayanov landed September 21 last year in northern Japan after a perilous nightlong voyage from the Kurile Islands aboard a homemade raft.

Only yesterday, the Army disclosed that Sergt. Vladimir Barashkov, of the Soviet Air Force, stole a Russian plane and crash-landed in Japan November 10.

Bulgaria Rests Case Against 15 Pastors

By Edward M. Korry

Sofia, Bulgaria, March 2 (U.P.).—The government tonight suddenly halted its parade of 60-odd witnesses against 15 Protestant pastors accused of espionage and treason and concluded its case against them. A verdict is expected Monday.

The prosecution dropped 42 witnesses who were scheduled to appear in court, indicating their testimony would have been redundant.

Fourteen of the 15 churchmen pleaded guilty to the charges of espionage, treason and black market activities. Ladin Ivanov Popov, small town pentecostal preacher, confessed only to black marketing.

The court will recess Thursday in honor of Bulgaria's independence day. Friday and Saturday attorneys for both sides will sum up. The sentences probably will come on Monday.

Witnesses today told how the defendants had solicited military data and other information from them. There was no way to distinguish between witnesses for the prosecution and witnesses for the defense. The testimony of all was equally damaging.

For the first time in the five-day trial documelts were introduced in court. Both the prosecution and defense submitted letters and articles to support their cases.

Yanko Nicolov Ivanov, supreme supervisor of the Methodist Church, heard his son testify against him today. Young Yanko said his father, whose name he bears, had asked him for information on plane production. The junior Ivanov formerly was a pilot in the Bulgarian air force.

British Shocked—Herring's Tasty Skin Is Cellophane

London, March 2 (A.P.).—Food Minister John Strachey tossed a bombshell today into the "dyed-or-varnished" debate which has split the herring lovers of England down the middle.

He told the House of Commons there isn't a varnished kipper on sale anywhere in the land—and never has been.

Strachey said what people thought was an artificial sheen on their kippered herring is merely the transparent cellophane wrapper the fancy ones come in.

Kipper addicts from John O'Groats to Land's End clutched their middles and turned green.

It looked very much as though some people were in the same fix as the country boy whose paper plate vanished when he ate the pie.

Russian Mission Held . . .

SIEGE—United States military policemen talk outside the Russian repatriation mission in Frankfurt which they blockaded after the Reds refused to comply with American orders and leave the U. Magyar Who Recanted Asks Forgiveness

Budapest, Hungary, March 2 (A.P.).—One of the 14 Budapest defendants who repudiated part of his confession asked the court's forgiveness today for doing so.

Gyorgy Nagy, a banker, declared yesterday he had been intimidated by police into making a pre-trial confession. He and the others are charged with "political conspiracy" and illegal financial deals with Josef Cardinal Mindszenty.

Today, however, he asked the court to forgive his behavior in the dock, saying "the physical and mental pain of the two months spent in prison" caused his outbreak.

Spectators wept as the accused men began final statements to the court today.

The trial recessed until Saturday, when the traditional last words of the accused will retire to arrive at a verdict.

Some of the defendants asked for mercy, and some dramatically sought to shoulder blame and shield others from punishment. Among the latter was Dr. Gabor Horvath, former secretary to Duke Paul Esterhazy.

Horvath, insisted that he, not the duke, was guilty of black market practices.

The Duke was convicted in the same trial as Cardinal Mindszenty and sentenced to 15 years in prison.

Anti-Red Plan Seen for Asia

London, March 2 (U.P.).—Governments of the British Commonwealth have decided to reach an understanding with "genuine nationalists" in southeast Asia to check the spread of communism, a high Commonwealth government source said today.

He said the decision was reached at the New Delhi conference on Burma last Monday. Formulation of such a policy will be discussed at the projected Commonwealth meeting later this year, he said.

Commonwealth government sources said the projected conference "could prove more important than China's change to communism," with eventually a single representative at the United Nations to prevent Commonwealth countries from being dwarfed by the United States and Russia.

Soviet Backs Slav Demands On Austria

London, March 2 (U.P.).—Russia supported Yugoslavia's demands today for territory, reparations, and minority guarantees from Austria in the Austrian peace treaty.

It was the first time during current treaty talks that the Soviet has fully backed Yugoslav claims, despite Yugoslavia's split with the Cominform.

The Soviet move came as the Big Four Deputy Foreign Ministers began their fourth week of talks on an Austrian pact.

The three Western deputies agreed today to the principle that minority rights in Austria should be guaranteed, but none would yield further on this point.

The Western delegates tried to avoid a clear cut stand on the territorial issue, but Soviet Delegate George Zarubin insisted they explain their position. When all three announced that they opposed, in principle, any territorial change, Zarubin commented wryly that this seemed to clarify the West's viewpoint.

He suggested, however, that the talks be continued.

West Aligns Views on New Constitution

Frankfurt, Germany, March 2 (U.P.).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States Military Governor of Germany today said the three western military governors had reached "complete agreement" on their views about the draft of a constitution for a new western German state.

Clay refused to say which parts of the draft drawn up by German leaders at Bonn, south of here, would have to be changed to meet allied approval. The draft has been criticized as being too nationalistic.

Clay and the other two military governors, Sir Brian Robertson of Britain and Gen. Pierre Koenig of France, met with five German politicians during the day to set out their objections, but results of these talks will not be known until Thursday noon.

Afterwards the German delegation withdrew for a brief consultation. When they returned, they asked for time to consult their colleagues before taking final action.

Charges of Persecution Rejected by Sweden

Stockholm, Sweden, March 2 (U.P.).—Sweden tonight rejected as "pure invention" Soviet charges that Swedish police had persecuted Baltic nationals in Sweden.

A Swedish note delivered tonight to the Russian Embassy emphasized that all residents of Sweden, regardless of nationality, "enjoy effective legal guarantees against encroachments and arbitrary measures by the authorities."

No Payment

Owners' Last Farms Taken By Romania

Bucharest, Romania, March 2 (A.P.).—The Romanian government seized today the scattered farms—estimated at 315,000 acres in all—which it had left to former big private land owners under the expropriation decree of 1945.

Livestock, poultry and farm machinery of the former big land owners also were taken. The decree of the supreme presidium exempted only the owners' personal belongings.

It said there would be no payment. Penalties for non-compliance were set at from 3 to 15 years in prison.

The decree said the owners, Romania's former landed gentry, failed to comply with regulations, and committed sabotage which led to the deterioration of farm machinery.

The government took over all land on ordinary farms of the landed classes in excess of 150 acres in 1945. It exempted some so-called model farms. The new decree expropriates all farms, regardless of type and size, belonging to the former big landowners. Small peasant land owners are not affected.

Blast Levels Plant

Istanbul, Turkey, March 2 (A.P.).—A violent blast leveled a private munitions plant here tonight and killed an undetermined number of persons.

Reliable informants said the plant had been making antiaircraft shells for Egypt and Syria.

A government spokesman said the death toll would be about 15, ubt eyewitnesses said they had seen far more bodies in the wreckage.

Pope Greeted By Thousands On Birthday

Vatican City, March 2 (U.P.).—Pope Pius XII today received thousands of congratulatory telegrams from all parts of the world on his seventy-third birthday and the tenth anniversary of his election to the pontificate.

No special observances were held in Vatican City. The pontiff himself put in a regular day's work. However, all offices were closed for Ash Wednesday, and papal and Vatican flags flew from all buildings in sign of rejoicing for the papal anniversaries.

The double anniversary will be commemorated March 12, on the tenth anniversary of the Pope's coronation, with a special pontifical mass in Michelangelo's famed Sistine Chapel.

Israel's Top Plan Job Goes To Ben-Gurion

Tel Aviv, March 2 (NYHT).—Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion will take over as Israel's supreme economic planning director in the new government which he is now forming, it was learned today.

Allocation of all cabinet posts should be completed within two days.

In addition to retaining the posts of prime minister and defense minister, Ben-Gurion will incorporate the reconstruction ministry's functions in the prime minister's office.

Mrs. Golda Myerson, Israeli minister to Russia, is reported scheduled to become minister of labor.

Senate Group Cuts ECA Flour Ratio

By The Associated Press

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee agreed yesterday that 15 per cent of the wheat shipped to Europe in next year's aid program shall be in the form of flour.

Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) announced the committee's decision. He said it came after a "good deal of pressure" from American milling interests.

In the first year's operations of the Economic Cooperation Administration, a total of 25 per cent of the wheat going to Europe was in the form of flour.

ECA asked that this 25 per cent provision be wiped out so that European countries could mill their own flour.

But American millers protested they wanted their "historical" flour market in Europe protected under ECA operations. They asked that the 25 per cent clause be retained. Later, they scaled down the request to 18 per cent.

Connally said the committee felt "we would have a fight on the floor of the Senate if we did not recognize the demands of the domestic folk."

The committee did not reach a final decision on the ECA request for $5,580,000,000 to carry its program to July 1, 1950.

Connally said he hopes the committee can reach a vote on the money total at a meeting today.

Harriman, Bevin Conferring on ECA

London, March 2 (NYHT).—W. Averell Harriman, Ambassador-at-Large for the European Cooperation Administration, and Ernest Bevin, British Foreign Secretary, conferred for the second day today on "general ECA problems." They were joined by Sir Stafford Cripps, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Lewis W. Douglas, American Ambasasdor at the Court of St. James's.

Although both American and British spokesmen refused to divulge details of the "general problems" which were discussed, it was reported reliably that the main topic concerned the Anglo-American negotiations on dismantling of industrial plants in western Germany.

The negotiations, which have been going on between Mr. Bevin and Mr. Douglas for more than two weeks, are understood to have made little if any progress.

World Bank Hit by Soviet

Lake Success, March 2 (NYHT.). Charges that the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development is a tool of the American State Department and discriminates against countries of eastern Europe were made today in the United Nations Economic Committee by Russia, Poland and Byelorussia.

Poland, the only one of the three holding membership in the bank, asserted that while Poland and Czechoslovakia were refused loans, the Netherlands and France were able to borrow from the bank to assist them in warfare against Indonesia and Viet Nam, respectively.

The occasion was an appearance before the committee of John J. McCloy, president of the bank, to report on its activities.

McCloy denied that any bank loan had been made for war use. He said the bank had not written off the possibility of granting a development loan to Poland.

Earlier, McCloy said Communist governments were not barred from obtaining loans, and said that the bank was considering loans to Yugoslavia and Finland.

Marshal Petain Shows 'Gradual Weakening'

Paris, March 2 (AP).—The health of Marshal Henri Phillipe Petain is "showing a gradual weakening due to old age," three physicians told the French Cabinet today.

The doctors were sent by the state to the Ile d'Yeu where the head of France's Vichy government is imprisoned. The marshal will be 93 on April 24.

Carnival Toll Heavy

Rio de Janeiro, March 2 (AP).—Police disclosed today that during the carnival celebration five persons were slain, 12 committed suicide, nine others tried to kill themselves and 2194 sustained assorted injuries. Carnival ended yesterday.

Gen. Travis Denies War Aid Story

Sydney, Australia, March 2 (AP). Brig. Gen. Robert Travis denied today he had said the United States would come to the aid of Australia in event that country were attacked.

"I said," Travis continued, "English speaking peoples had been allied in the past and I thought they would continue to be allied in any crisis which arises in the future."

Travis, commanding general of the United States Pacific Air Command, came here on a good-will mission. All Sydney newspapers, reporting his arrival, carried accounts of a statement on United States assistance which Travis denied today.

From here the mission will go to Tasmania, New Zeaaland and Samoa.

Quick Action Seen On Veteran Money

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A widower of a World War II Wac would receive the same pension under his multi-billion-dollar pension bill as the widow of a veteran,. Chairman John Rankin (D., Miss.) of the House Veterans Committee said yesterday.

Elated at indications the House Rules Committee might give the green light to his measure Friday, Rankin first said "the widower of a Wac would get the same pension as the Wac of a widower." Laughing, he quickly corrected himself.

The issue was raised at a hearing yesterday before the House Rules Committee, which postponed action until Friday to give all members of Congress a chance to be heard.

The measure came under fire yesterday from Representative Phil J. Welch (D., Mo.), a freshman member, who charged that Rankin had introduced it "to get even with the Administration." Early in the present session Rankin was maneuvered off the House Committee on Un-American Activities on which he has served many years.

The Administration has opposed the bill on the ground of the excessive burden it is likely to be to the taxpayers. Rankin told the Rules Committee, however, that the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars, while preferring their own measures, are not opposed to this one. He appeared confident of victory once the bill clears the hurdles and reaches the floor.

Welch described the bill as "an octopus that would almost strangle the Nation into bankruptcy." The American Veterans' Committee yesterday issued a blast against the bill, and charged its total cost would be at least 150 billion dollars, instead of the 109 billions estimated by Rankin.

Rankin told the Rules Committee AVC was "Communist-infested." Some members, he charged, were not even veterans.

Representative Leo Allen (R., Ill.), ranking Republican on the Rules Committee, said he did not see how any member could vote against the bill in view of the fact that Spanish-American war veterans were receiving pensions up to $90 a month.

Rankin said that several members of Congress are drawing pensions as Spanish-American war veterans.

Representative Eugene Cox (D., Ga.) queried:

"Do you think they should?"

Rankin retorted that he was not the keeper of their consciences.

Information on which members were drawing pensions was not available.

Hines Amuses

AFL Wants Tax-Exempt, Colored Oleo

Eight million members of the American Federation of Labor want oleomargarine colored in the factory, and without special taxes, Lewis G. Hines, AFL legislative official, said yesterday.

Hines told the House Agriculture Committee, which is studying 29 bills on the subject, that he would like to have a law requiring public eating houses that serve butter to advertise the fact.

"They should be forced to post signs saying 'We Serve Butter Here,' so I can be warned I'm not getting my favorite margerine," he declared.

Can't Afford Butter

Hines declared he "feeds 10 people at my table and I can't afford butter." He resides, he added, in Arlington, and is at the mercy of the dairy interests in Virginia, which make him pay 22 cents a quart for milk.

When Representative August H. Andresen (R., Minn.) interrupted to say that milk in the midwest dairy country is selling below support levels, Hines shouted:

"They wouldn't let you in here. They have a milkshed here. That means they have a closed shop."

"You recommend a closed shop, don't you?" Andresen asked the labor official.

Hearing in Stitches

"We haven't time to get into that," Hines replied.

Hines kept the hearing room in laughter during his exchange with Andresen and Representative Reid F. Murray (R., Wis.) leading butter supporters.

He assured both that they were mistaken, that there is close cooperation between the AFL and the farmers.

"That was evidenced by the fact that they joined us to beat Joe Ball (former Senator from Minnesota) last time," he told them.

Supporters of untaxed, colored margarine will finish their case today—a fight that has been going on almost constantly since the anti-margarine laws were passed 63 years ago. Then the butter industry will present its case.

Senate Gets Missouri Valley Bill

By the United Press

A bill to create a Missouri Valley Authority to supervise water power and land development in the Missouri Basin was introduced yesterday by Senator James E. Murray (D., Mont.) and 13 colleagues.

Murray said the project would be modeled after the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Bonneville Power Administration on the Columbia River. It would supervise the construction and operation of installations for flood control, power generation, soil conservation, forest preservation and irrigation.

The bill would:

1. Set up a board of five directors, three of whom would be Missouri Basin residents.
2. Create the post of general manager of the Missouri Valley Authority.
3. Call for development of an MVA plan "as expeditiously as possible." (The plan would have to be approved by Congress before any funds were authorized.)
4. Create an advisory board of 12 citizens representing agriculture, labor, commerce, industry and recreation. Additional members would come from the Federal agencies concerned with the project. Governors of 10 Missouri Basin States would constitute a special committee to advise and cooperate with MVA directors.

Other sponsors are Senators Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa), Hubert H. Humphrey (D., Minn.), Theodore F. Green (D., R. I.), Lister Hill (D., Ala.), Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.), William Langer (R., N. Dak.), J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), Claude Pepper (D., Fla.), Glen Taylor (D., Idaho), Robert F. Wagner (D., N. Y.), Milton R. Young (R., N. Dak.), Dennis Chavez (D., N. Mex.), and Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.).

GOP Group Employs New Hampshire Man

The Senate Republican Policy Committee yesterday named John Pillsbury, Manchester, N. H., as its secretary and staff director.

Pillsbury, now a member of the New Hampshire Legislature, worked last year as a staff member of the Senate Appropriations Committee. His new post pays about $10,000. He succeeds George H. E. Smith who resigned to return to Connecticut and write a book.

James E. Murray (D., Mont.), a strong advocate of the rules change, gave the Southerners a two-hour rest when the Senate convened.

Thirty-year-old Russell B. Long (D., La.), son of Louisiana's late "Kingfish," who nearly broke the Senate filibuster record in 1935, led off yesterday for the Southerners.

Huey's boy, making his maiden Senate speech, talked for only 56 minutes as a starter, in contrast to his father's 15½-hour record against NRA.

Young Long, his black hair neatly combed back in a wave, his hands alternately waving or shoved in pockets, offered even more contrast. He spoke rapidly, kept studiously to his subject, never moved from behind his desk, and mostly read his speech.

Likens Cloture to Termite

The late Kingfish used to shake his tousled brown mane, stalk to and fro behind his desk and extemporize on every subject from the Bible to the Constitution to Louisiana "pot likker."

Young Long called unlimited debate in the Senate "one of our most precious heritages" and termed cloture in any form "an evil, a gnawing termite at our very vitals."

"Today I ask for the right of unlimited debate for the defense of my people, for the defense of their customs, their traditions, their very society, from ruthless dictation and control by a sovereignty that heeds too much the advice from pressure groups from afar," he said.

He said the South "happens to be the whipping boy today" but tomorrow it might be the Jews, the Catholics, the Protestants or the Negroes."

White-haired, frock-coated Senator Clyde R. Hoey (D., N. C.) followed Long to the floor with a speech that lasted 1 hour and 24 minutes.

Like the four earlier Southern speakers, Hoey charged the proposals to limit Senate debate "originated in political consideration." He said minority groups hope to "railroad through the Senate" legislation invading the rights of individuals. He said the rules change might lead to "the excesses and abuses of totalitarian government."

Senator Spessard L. Holland (D., Fla.), speaking from notes, followed Hoey. He had talked 45 minutes when the Senate recessed. Lucas obtained unanimous consent for him to resume when the Senate convenes today.

Holland said the Senate was conceived as a forum for the States, "where the States would be represented as such and receive equal treatment."

He said the present cloture rule would never have been adopted had it not been for national emergency considerations in 1917, as the country neared World War I.

Opposing the tightened two-thirds cloture rule, Holland said the Senate might not stop there. He pointed out that his party's own leadership in the Senate is pledged to support a majority-vote cloture amendment.

Lucas' decision to postpone the first cloture test until next week was based on assurances from Republicans and Democrats sympathetic to the move that his effort to cut the filibuster short will gain strength as the Southerners talk.

Some Senators in both parties, it was said, are hesitant to pledge their support "until it looks more like a filibuster." These pointed out that only five Dixie Senators have spoken to date, and almost as much time has been consumed by Senators from other sections on other subjects.

With Democrats split almost down the middle, all concede Republicans will decide the issue in an extremely close vote. Sample checks indicated Republicans now are about as badly split as the Democrats.

Republicans opposing any ruling by Barkley that cloture applies to a motion to call up a bill point to the contrary "precedent" by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) last year.

But if a majority of them stick with the Vandenberg finding they will run smack into Administration charge that they "played politics" to stalemate the Truman program. Democratic leaders also argue that such a vote wouldn't square with a recent Republican conference stand for a permanent change in the rules to clear the way for civil rights legislation.

The President meanwhile was represented as anxious for a prompt decision. Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah) brought back this word to the Capitol after a White House conference.

Thomas told reporters: I told the President that any country that can send its people to war on a bare majority vote ought to be ashamed of itself

Dr. Melish Ousted, Given Life Pension

New York, March 2 (U.P.).—The Rev. Dr. John Howard Melish, 75, rector of the Holy Trinity Church for 45 years, was discharged today because of the pro-Soviet activities of his son, assistant rector of the church.

Episcopal Bishop James P. DeWolfe announced that Dr. Melish was being retired April 4 with a pension for the remainder of his life which would be equivalent to the pay he would receive. He said the Dioceson Standing Body had voted unanimously for removal of Dr. Melish.

The son, the Rev. William Melish, 38, is chairman of the National Council for Soviet American Friendship and was an ardent campaign supporter of Henry A. Wallace.

Dr. Melish said he would have a statement Thursday.

It was expected the new rector of the church would discharge the younger Melish.

The bishop disclosed he had interviewed Dr. Melish and his son separately, more than once; that he had told them they ought to resign and that both had refused.

The question, Bishop De Wolfe said, is the effect upon the church of young Mr. Melish's activity "among reputed atheists, Communists, agitators of world revolution, totalitarianism and almost every article which denies the Christian doctrine of man."

Loyalty Bill Hearing Set At Annapolis

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Opponents of Maryland's subversive activities bill get their last crack at the controversial measure at a hearing in Annapolis this morning.

Only those ready to offer amendments to the Ober bill will be heard. Bernard D. Melnicove, charman of the House committee on judicial proceeding, will direct the hearing.

Two weeks ago the bill passed the Senate unanimously after a single public hearing.

But although opposition to the bill has materialized only recently, a concerted effort will be made at the 10 a. m. hearing today to amend it drastically.

At least five persons, two of them State officials, will offer amendments.

Attorney General Hall Hammond will seek to have the "special assistant attorney general in charge of subversive activities," provided for in the bill, removed from his office. Hammond said last night his office does not and should not have anything to do with criminal prosecution.

State Superintendent of Education Thomas G. Pullen will seek to delete entirely those sections of the bill which create the special assistant attorney general, give him police powers, and require him to maintain secret records of Maryland loyalty.

Milton C. Raver, executive secretary of the State Teachers Association, will offer an amendment which would make it punishable to wrongly and falsely accuse a person of disloyalty.

He will also offer amendments to those sections of the bill which requires personnel loyalty investigations by private institutions before State-aid funds can be disbursed, and to that section which provides that public employes, including teachers, can be dismissed on only "reasonable grounds" that they are subversive.

Two independent citizens committees, representing more than 200 educators, lawyers, physicians, artists, ministers and civic leaders, will be represented at the hearing.

'Watchdog' Plan May Be Saved

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A move to rescue the joint Senate-House watchdog committee set up by the Taft-Hartley Act is being considered in the House Labor Committee, it was learned yesterday.

The plan, as suggested by Representative Augustine B. Kelley (D., Pa.), would be to re-create the joint committee into a commission to study the problems arising out of the national management-labor code and to make recommendations to Congress.

Truman Urged Similar Plan

A similar plan was urged by President Truman in 1947 before the Eightieth Congress repealed the Wagner Act and replaced it with the Taft-Hartley Act. Now the Administration is seeking to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act and replace it with the Thomas bill, a modified version of the Wagner Act.

The Thomas bill, in effect, eliminates the joint watchdog committee.

Representative Kelley heads a House Labor Subcommittee which plans to meet by Monday to open hearings on the Lesinski bill, which is identical with the Senate's Thomas bill. The Senate Labor Committee is due to come up with a decision on the Thomas bill Friday.

Would Extend Overtime Bill

Meanwhile, a Senate Labor subcommittee yesterday heard Walker Cisler, vice president of Detroit Edison, urge that the bill to ban "overtime on overtime," already passed in the House, be extended to cover all industry. The bill, backed by labor, management, and the Labor Department, limits the ban to the stevedore, longshore and construction industries.

The "overtime on overtime" issue arose out of a Supreme Court decision last summer. The court held that premium rates of pay for work at irregular times, such as nights, Sundays and holiadys, must be counted as part of an employe's regular pay in figuring overtime payments for work in excess of 40 hours a week.

Frauenheim to Present Benefit Piano Recital

A piano recital by Norman Frauenheim will be presented in Pierce Hall, 15th and Harvard sts. nw., at 8:15 p. m., Thursday, March 10.

The recital will benefit the interracial summer projects of the Joint Social Order Committee of the Friends Meeting of Washington.

The Communications Workers of America, representing 230,000 telephone workers, will seek a fourth round of postwar pay raises, the independent union announced yesterday.

The demand for the wage boost will be the prime objective of the CWA affiliates in their bargaining with the phone companies, most of which are members of the Bell Telephone System.

Unlike other unions—such as the CIO's United Auto Workers—which are putting pensions and welfare funds in the forefront, the CWA is out chiefly after a hike in pay.

Telephone workers are generally ahead of other industrial employes in the way of fringe benefits such as pensions, sick leave, vacation and holiday pay, but are behind in the matter of straight pay, according to some CWA leaders.

Kickoff in the 1948 drive for more pay in the phone industry will take place March 10, when CWA's New Jersey traffic division serves its demand on New Jersey Bell. How much of an increase will be asked is yet to be announced.

CWA's wage increase campaign will pick up momentum throughout the country, and hit its high in the fall, when most of its union affiliates will be able to reopen their contracts.

During the past three years, CWA has obtained wage increases as follows: $5 to $8 a week in 1946, when a strike was averted by a settlement 25 minutes before deadline; $2 to $5 in 1947, after a 7-week strike; $3-$4 to $6 in 1948 as part of a 3-year contract which allows another wage reopening before the contract runs out in May of 1950.

None of the Washington area units affiliated with CWA will reopen their contracts for wage discussions until fall, according to CWA headquarters.

Division 50, made up mainly of local operators here, got a $3 to $4 a week third-round raise which went into effect January 16, 1948.

Division 36, chiefly maintenance workers here, received a third-round increase of $3 to $6 last November. Division 16, comprising clerical workers in the Maryland Bell System, also had a third-round pay hike last fall. Virginia's Division 33 is still negotiating a settlement on the third round.

Joseph A. Beirne, president of CWA said the organization was seeking the pay boost because wages paid to traffic employes in the telephone industry are substandard.

He asserted that telephone operators' starting wages are as much as $13 a week below minimum subsistence levels. Furthermore, Beirne declared, the first three-round increase in the phone industry were lower than the increase in other major organized industries, amounting in all to 11 cents an hour.

VA Changes Are Urged

many of which are based on "a process rather than a program."

3. An excessive number of staff officers for major programs, causing confusion of responsibility.

4. The entire structure of VA is too complicated, with too much written instructions. "There is an excess of voluminous written instructions on internal methods and procedures which defy intelligent execution," the report states. It spoke of 88 different manuals, 665 varieties of technical bulletins, and "over 400 circulars."

5. Difficulties over which VA has had little control, such as veterans not being fully advised about their insurance rights by the Armed Services when discharged.

6. Too high employe turnover.

The report pointed out that VA spends about 11 per cent of the total national budget. It found VA has too little control over veterans schooling program. In some instances, it said, VA pays the highest possible tuition and equipment charges to schools where such charges are "difficult, if not impossible, to justify."

Rarities in the Bird World . . .

The Washington Post

ALBINO LOVE BIRDS—A trio of pure white parakeets, or love birds, make their camera debut. They are three of a klutch of five offspring of an aquamarine-colored male and a chartreuse-colored female from Australia, brought to the United States last July by Mr. and Mrs. Martin Dale of 818 Arlington Mill dr., S. Arlington, Va. A fourth was gold colored and the fifth was normally colored when they were hatched six weeks ago. According to Dr. William Mann, Zoo director, albino birds are rare in this species.

Credit Controls Eased on Installment Buying

intended to do about curbs on installment buying.

He said he was "happy" to see that the board followed the committee's recommendations in its "constructive relation of Regulation W." He was "confident" that industry would respond by not raising prices and thought that the order should help keep production high.

Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.) a leader among lawmakers who were complaining that the controls were too tight, had called for a 24-month limit on clearing up balances.

The 21-month allowance ordered by the board yesterday is midway between the figure suggested by Patman and the board's old 18-month limit.

Authority Expires June 30

The Federal Reserve Board, in its announcement, said its "modification" of control terms was based on "continuous study of the operations of the regulation since it was reinstated last September, and on the experience of Federal Reserve banks and their branches in administration in the field."

The board's authority to impose controls is due to expire June 30, and it is seeking extension of the authority from Congress. In this connection, yesterday's statement said:

"Last summer . . . the board stated that the authority would be used flexibly and that the board would be ready at all times to tighten or relax the terms in accordance with the objectives of the authority and with a view to sound credit conditions."

Items Involved

Under the board's new order, down payments will be cut from 20 to 15 per cent on the following items:

Cooking stoves and ranges, mechanical dishwashers, ironers, mechanical refrigerators of less than 12 cubic feet of rates storage capacity, including food freezers; washing machines, combination units incorporating any listed articles in the group; room unit air conditioners, radio or television receiving sets, phonographs or combinations, sewing machines, suction cleaners, household furniture, including ice refrigerators, bedsprings, mattresses, lamps and soft surface floor coverings.

The order covers all credit purchases of those items and automobiles involving credit of from $50 to $5000. Previously, only credits of more than $1000 were payable in 18 monthly payments.

Auto Circles Expect Sales to Increase

Detroit, March 2 (AP).—Lagging car sales will be stimulated by the modification of credit restrictions.

That was the reaction in most auto industry circles tonight to the Federal Reserve Board's action in easing stipulations of Regulation W.

Extension of the installment payment term from 18 to 21 months was not all the retail car dealers and some manufacturers had hoped for. Interested circles, however, regarded it as a "step in the right direction."

Most critics of the credit restriction had hoped the Reserve Board would extend to at least 24 months the time a motorist could have in which to complete payments on his car purchase.

Ford Declares Pension Would Boost Prices

Detroit, March 2 (AP).—The Ford Motor Co. today said that a pension plan for its 100,000 workers can result only "in higher car prices," and asked union help in keeping prices down.

The statement was made in a letter from Ford Vice President John S. Bugas to United Automobile Workers President Walter Reuther.

In the letter—also sent to all Ford employes—Bugas asked that UAW-CIO representatives meet "informally" with company officials prior to the actual start of contract negotiations in May or June.

Union officials declined any immediate comment on the Ford proposal.

The UAW-CIO has announced that Ford will be the No. 1 target in a drive for $100-a-month pensions for automobile workers, over and above Social Security payments. Workers would be eligible at the age of 60.

Besides a pension plan, the union also is seeking a health and welfare plan, and as asking, but soft-pedaling, a wage increase that would restore its workers' buying power to the level of June, 1946, when price controls were discontinued.

This three-point program has not been formally served on any auto company, as yet.

Reuther has estimated that the wage increase would run between 8 and 10 cents an hour above the present industry level of approximately $1.65 an hour.

Interior Observes 100th Anniversary

One hundred years ago, on his last day in office, President James K. Polk signed the bill setting up the Department of the Interior.

To mark the anniversary, on this March 3, Interior Secretary Julius A. Krug yesterday outlined an ambitious program for the "next 100 years."

Krug said he was "loking forward" to the report on his Department from the Hoover Commission.

"We have tried to anticipate its recommendations," he said. "We have tried to achieve in recent years some of the things Hoover has approved."

No 'Loose Confederation"

The result, he said, is that Interior is no longer a "loose confederation" of separate agencies, of which the Hoover Commission complained in an early report on Government reorganization.

He declared his support of the St. Lawrence Seaway as a Federal enterprise, and listed as immediate goals:

1. Development of river valleys, to add 17 million acres of irrigated land and increase yields on 9 million more.

2. Increase Western range lands, reseed 22 milion acres in grass and other vegetation, and develop Western phosphate fertilizer production.

3. Complete geologic mapping of 90 per cent of country still unmapped.

4. Develop "perpetual reserves" for commercial cutting of lumber in public forests.

For More Forests

5. Replant thousands of acres of forest land and increase fire and disease protection in them.

6. Encourage private and public constuction of 80 million kilowatts of additional power by 1970, of which 30 million should be hydroelectric, built by the Government. Present total energy is about 53 million kilowatts, of which 10 per cent is Government-operated.

7. More research in long distance power transmission.

8. Expand supply of liquid fuels.

9. Develop oil reserves in submerged land.

10. All-out development of Alaska.

11. Assist backward areas of the world with technical knowledge.

Key Atomic Idea Hailed

Pittsburgh, March 2 (AP).—The Westinghouse Electric Corp. announced today its scientists made one of the key wartime atom splitting discoveries.

This feat was reported in the stockholders' quarterly, with permission of the United States Atomic Energy Commission. The facts had been secret until today.

The Westinghouse discovery was precisely how much energy will do the best atom-splitting. This energy is the speed of neutrons—atomic particles — that emerge when an atom splits.

These neutron particles come out of the split traveling thousands of miles a second. As the neutrons slow down, their ability to split other atoms of uranium or plutonium goes up rapidly.

Finally comes a point where a great number of splits occur. This point had to be discovered in order to make an atomic pile, or oven, work efficiently. Westinghouse scientists worked for two years in laboratory experiments to find the ideal speed.

Westinghouse has been employed to develop atomic boilers to make steam for ships. Today's announcement stated that the company has been working on atomic ship power for three years. The atomic engines won't have any fire, smoke or smell.

Maryland U. Budget Bill Goes to House

By Phillip J. Austensen
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., March 2.—The House ways and means committee today voted favorably on a bill which would require the University of Maryland to submit detailed budgets to the Legislature.

In the past, University of Maryland budgets have been submitted as lump sum requests. Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university opposed the measure two weeks ago at a hearing on the bill, introduced by Delegate Horace P. Whitworth, jr., (R., Allegheny).

At the hearing, Dr. Byrd promised complete statements on his proposed budget within two weeks but these have not been received as yet, committee members said.

Whitworth told the committee he believes that Dr. Byrd will keep his word but that it is his own feeling that itemized budgets should be required by law. He said Dr. Byrd had promised Dr. Carl Everstine of the department of legislative reference a copy of the budget items months ago but that Dr. Everstine is "still waiting" for the copies.

Whitworth said his bill reflects "nothing personal" in his relations with Dr. Byrd. He said he did not agree with Dr. Byrd that funds received by the university other than State and Federal should not concern the Legislature. He also said that he agrees that the disclosure of salaries paid instructors might cause a "little trouble" for Dr. Byrd but that "I see nothing wrong with making public money public knowledge."

The bill now must await action by the House and Senate before going to the Governor for signature.

The committee also reported favorably a bill to permit charter counties to issue bonds to a limit of 10 per cent of the assessable base instead of the 7 per cent limit now permitted by State law. Montgomery County is the only county in the State with a charter form of government. The bill was introduced by the Montgomery County delegation.

Construction of a $2,500,000 toll bridge across the Patuxent River between Hallowing Point in Calvert County and Benedict in Charles County now is before Governor Lane. The bill cleared the House today.

Morningside Town Plan Gets Backing

By a Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., March 2.—Some 75 residents of the Morningside community in Prince Georges County, testifying before the county legislative delegation at the Statehouse here tonight favored the town's incorporation by 4 to 1.

Edward A. Glenn, spokesman for the supporters of the incorporation bill, declared residents would receive better services under a municipal setup than they now receive from the county.

$16,000 in Sight

He contended the town would obtain about $5000 in municipal taxes and $7000 from the State, which, supplemented by miscellaneous funds from the county and other sources, would total about $16,000. This would be adequate to operate the town government, he maintained.

Delegate LeRoy Pumphrey, who presided, advised sponsors of the bill to submit it to Dr. Horace Flack, director of the State department of legislative reference, for clarification of certain provisions.

Area Included

The bill would include within the town's limits the area bounded by Mayhew rd., Suitland pkwy. and Allentown rd. in Spauldings Election District, excluding the section known as Skyline subdivision. A five-member council would be empowered to levy tax assessments up to 50 cents for each $100 real property valuation.

Big Expansion Plan Revealed

ditional profits to service and liquidate the loan.

". . . The predictions made at the last annual meeting in October 1948 have to date materialized as is evidenced by the improved operating results for the first six months of the current fiscal year. The management feels confident that results for the balance of the year will show continued progress.

A spokesman for the company last night refused to confirm current reports that Woodward's plans to construct a tunnel under G street to connect its north and main buildings.

Air-Conditioning Included

Part of the modernization of the two buildings, it is understood, will include air conditioning of the north building and extension of electric stairways in both buildings.

For the fiscal year ended July 31, 1948, Woodward's reported sales of $33,891,139, as compared with $39,015,070 in the previous fiscal year.

Amortization of the Metropolitan loan, it is understood, will be started on March 1, 1951, when Woodward's will make an initial payment of $300,000. The annual payments will then rise to $25,000 a year until 1955, when $400,000 will be paid. Payments after that will continue at the $400,000 level.

Arrested in Lottery

Vice squad detectives arrested Max Miller, 65, of 1225 Holbrook st. ne., yesterday and charged him with operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips.

Police said Miller, who was picked up at about 2 p. m. at the corner of 5th and Neal sts. ne., had $525 in his possession. Miller was released in $1500 bond pending his arraignment in Municipal Court today.

Fairfax School Budget Put at $2,506,048

A budget calling for expenditure of $2,506,048 on Fairfax County schools during the fiscal year starting July 1 was presented to Fairfax County Supervisors yesterday by the school board.

The supervisors promptly handed it back for revision because the budget included an anticipated $50,000 appropriation from the county general fund.

The supervisors told Schools Supt. W. T. Woodson there was no possibility of finding the $50,000 among other county funds and suggested the school board request a 10-cent increase in the school tax levy.

The school budget as presented would not have increased the tax rate.

Woodson said the $50,000 item was to go toward construction of four-room elementary schools which the school board has planned as an emergency measure to ease the schoolroom shortage. Counting the $50,000, the school budget included $270,000 for six of the emergency buildings.

Woodson said he would call a meeting of the school board as soon as possible to reconsider means of raising the $50,000.

The school budget as presented contemplated spending about $600,000 more than was spent during the current year.

Woman Burned Critically as House Dress Catches Fire

Mrs. Lillie Robinson, 48, was critically burned in her home, at 1124 Bladensburg rd. ne., at about 8:45 a. m. yesterday, when her house coat caught fire when she brushed against a hot coal stove in the dining room.

Police said she ran to the kitchen and threw water on the burning garment, then ran into the back yard and tried to pump more water. She collapsed.

At Casualty Hospital, it was reported she had suffered second and third degree burns to her entire body.

Fire Pvt. John A. Harrington, 40, of Engine Co. No. 8 suffered minor burns about the face while helping fight a fire at 1 p. m. at 28 D st. se. Harrington, who lives at 5021 Hanna pl. se., was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Firemen said the blaze started when an oil stove exploded. The fire destroyed a first floor apartment.

Serving The Veterans

In an operation so sprawling and cumbersome as the Veterans' Administration the temptation is to regard any major streamlining attempt as hopeless. Probably nowhere in the Government is there so much division between the old-line bureaucracy and the reformists brought in to expand facilities after World War II. General Bradley, during his period as Veterans' Administrator, found himself often thwarted by an old guard accustomed to traditional methods. The very existence of this split makes improvement as much a question of personalities as of administrative mechanisms. It is probably for this reason that the recommendations of the Hoover Commission, concerned with procedures, seem far from startling.

Recently the unsuccessful effort at decentralization attempted by General Bradley has been reversed. The Hoover Commission endeavors to expedite more efficient administration by breaking through the spider web of interrelated operations and setting up clear channels of authority. It advocates reorganization to group the VA around its major functions—insurance, education, pensions and loans. The regrouping seems sensible, though it may involve duplication of records in cases involving more than one VA service. What the commission neglects is to make clear the line of command between the central office and the regional offices now that the intermediate branches have been abolished.

Probably the most significant changes in the Veterans' Administration have to do with medical service, which is covered in another report. The outstanding feature of this particular report, it seems to us, is the recommended consolidation of insurance functions in a Government corporation. The commission had the counsel of a number of experts from private insurance companies, and the consolidation is aimed at speeding claim procedure as well as distributing the work load more efficiently.

What the Hoover Commission has done is to recommend some badly needed untangling of authority. Particularly in the VA, however, whether these changes will mean anything will depend on the attitude of the employes who must administer them.

Home For Every Family

Seldom has a bill gone before the Senate with such impressive indorsement as the new housing measure carries. It was introduced by Senator Ellender for himself and 21 other Senators of both parties. Apparently it reflects a consensus of constructive thinking in Congress. If so, that is a fact of great significance, for the bill lays down a national housing policy that is at once sound, practicable and forward-looking.

In the present bill the Senate Banking and Currency Committee has abandoned the effort to deal with all phases of housing legislation. That is a logical consequence of the failure of last year's all-inclusive bill. This time the committee is concentrating on a declaration of national housing policy, authorization of Federal assistance to local communities for slum clearance and low-cost housing, assistance for low-cost farm housing and a comprehensive program of research. We think farm housing also might well have been left for separate consideration, since it has very little relation to urban housing. But that detail scarcely detracts from the appealing nature of the bill as a whole.

The objective at which the bill aims is "a decent home and a suitable living environment for every American family." Of course, this does not mean that Congress intends to provide homes for every family now inadequately housed. The primary reliance is upon private enterprise. Private industry will not only be encouraged to serve as large a part of the population as it possibly can. Government assistance is to be given, notably through sound financing and research in building materials and methods, to enable private builders to satisfy a larger share of the total demand for housing. But the bill also clearly recognizes the public responsibility for clearing slums and blighted areas and providing good low-cost housing for families who cannot afford to live in decent privately owned quarters. Public housing with Federal assistance is to be undertaken, as in the past, only when local communities demonstrate the need for it and devise appropriate plans. In every instance the initiative will have to come from the communities themselves.

This is necessarily a slow process, but in our opinion it is the only sound basis on which a public housing program can rest. We think the committee has done well to give first emphasis to a long-range attack upon the slums and to the housing of families that will necessarily be displaced when the transformation process begins. In some instances, indeed, as in the District of Columbia, new housing will have to come first to avoid the overcrowding of existing insanitary shacks beyond the danger point. If the general policy outlined in this measure is properly understood, we surmise that it will draw overwhelming approval.

Cutting Into The Bone

Owing to the rapid growth of Washington, there is crying need for more schools, more health centers, and an expanded welfare program. Capital improvements deferred during the war years have become imperative, while the cost of current operating services are higher because of the rise in prices. As the District is denied the right to borrow, expenditures have to be limited to amounts that local taxpayers can reasonably be expected to finance. For that reason the District Commissioners pared departmental budget recommendations for the coming fiscal year to the bone before submitting them to Congress. Nevertheless, the House voted yesterday to reduce their estimates by 4.4 million dollars—a cut that will, if permitted to stand, deprive the community of highly essential services.

The major reduction involves the rescinding of previous appropriations for a Negro high school, required to relieve intolerable overcrowding. The project will be deferred a year or more while conditions grow progressively worse. No real economy will result. The reduction of $500,000 in Health Department funds is another severe blow to the community, since even the Commissioners' budget failed to provide money for initiating many essential and long overdue capital outlays for expansion of hospital facilities and did not carry really adequate allowances for current operating expenses. Dr. Ruhland has, indeed, warned that a continuance of present policies can result only in declines in community health and greater loss of life.

The heavy cut in public assistance grants to a level only slightly above the 1948 appropriation is likewise indefensible. For relief payments are at present based on 1942 cost-of-living standards instead of the 1946 basis proposed by the Commissioners. A rich city cannot excuse its failure to make decent provision for the destitute on fiscal grounds, though that is the reason given by the House Appropriations Committee for its slash in public assistance grants.

Despite a backlog of needed sewer improvements, estimated to cost 20 million dollars, the appropriation bill calls for a cut of more than a million dollars in this item. This kind of economy is certainly penny-wise and pound foolish, for neglect of sanitary needs may yield dividends in the form of disease and rising death rates.

No provision is made for increased pay for District employes. Even with the proposed reductions, expenditures would exceed revenues by an estimated 2.5 million dollars. The committee proposes to cover this deficit by raising property tax rates. Bills for raising new revenue for the District have still to be considered. The proposed 2 per cent sales tax would, according to estimates, just about cover the cost of pay increases retroactive to July 1. The increase in the Federal contribution urged by the Commissioners plus proposed increases in liquor and license taxes are counted on to make up the rest of the deficit without necessitating further cuts in the budget.

There is still hope, therefore, that prompt action on pending tax legislation will avert final acceptance of the House bill. Any budget can be cut, as Governor Dewey said in defense of his State budget, and accounts can be made to balance provided the people are prepared to cut the services provided by government. In Washington, unfortunately, the people have no choice in the matter. They have to rely on Congress to recognize their needs and vote the taxes required to meet them. The record of Congress to date is that of a niggardly and unimaginative provider whose unwillingness to give District financial problems the attention and the skillful guidance they deserve is one of the strongest arguments for a form of District home rule that would give the people a voice in the management of city government.

Doctors' Revolt

Reversing a vote taken at its January meeting, the New York County Medical Society voted last Monday against the $25 "assessment" levied by the American Medical Association on each of its 140,000 members. As the Manhattan group is the largest local affiliate of the A. M. A., this move, though it is not the first of its kind, may have wide repercussions. It reflects the growing dissatisfaction within the rank and file of M. D.'s over the generally standfast policies of the A. M. A. leadership, and incidentally proves to the hilt, as Dr. Frothingham has contended all along, that the $25 levy is not compulsory.

To be sure, the New York body was probably moved in considerable part—and rightly—by indignation over the infamous "Dan Gilbert letter" of last December. Copies of this vicious attack on the national health insurance plan were sent to all doctors by the National Physicians Committee, a lobby group that has no official connection with the A. M. A. but has been several times indorsed by it. The letter was addressed "Dear Christian American" and contained a number of veiled appeals to religious prejudice. The National Physicians Committee covering letter called it "one of the few really vital pronouncements of an age."

This is the kind of propaganda the doctors would be better off without, and we think the A. M. A. would serve the medical profession best by unequivocally repudiating the National Physicians Committee for this blunder. Such an action would reinforce the testimony of the A. M. A.'s own 12-point health plan that the organized medical profession is not wedded to deep reactionism but realizes that in a changing world there is need to find new and better ways of dealing with old problems. Doctors should have open minds on human affairs as well as on scientific developments.

Arrow Into Air

Since the national election last November there has been a disposition in some quarters (including, we fear, the Blair House) to discount the long-celebrated influence of the press. Now the curious thing about the influence of the press is that one can never be sure of now or where or when it will take effect. Let us illustrate:

About four and a half years ago Senator Pepper came forward with a proposal that the proceedings of Congress be broadcast from day to day so that the sovereign voters could be fully informed about how their representatives were conducting themselves. Commenting upon this proposal in what, on the whole, was a tone of approval, we observed that

> . . . since it is customary for Congress to convene at the time of day when the majority of the radio audience would be housewives, listening while they cleared away the lunch dishes or sprinkled the wash or shelled the lima beans, certain changes of procedure would of course be necessary. For if the broadcasts should follow the pattern made familiar by the pages of the Congressional Record our legislators would, we fear, be turned out in favor of Mary Metcalf's Marriage or Resident Surgeon or Lydia Learns Life. The debates, therefore, will have to be spiced up a bit, according to a well-known and, we dare say, rather easily mastered formula; and we went on to prepare a sort of working script, showing how romantic interest could be interwoven into the often humdrum business of lawmaking.

Well, nothing was made of our suggestion—or so we thought. But the other day in the Idaho House of Representatives our script, or something very much like it, was suddenly enacted. Indeed the chief difference between our dialogue between two members of Congress and the one actually recited between Representative Edwin Snow of Adams County and Representative Edith Miller of Ada County is that ours was slightly less on the romantic side and theirs a little less on the political. The gentleman from Adams arose to ask if the lady from Ada would yield for a question. The lady replied she would yield, for that purpose, but reserved the right to answer or ignore the question. The gentleman from Adams asked if the lady from Ada would marry him. The lady replied that since the question was an important one she would require time to consider her answer. Later, however, rising to a point of personal privilege, she announced that after careful deliberation she decided to accept the offer of the gentleman from Adams.

Now the farthest thing from our thought would be to disturb the felicity of Representatives Snow and Miller by an insinuation of plagiarism. Since both Adams and Ada Counties lie somewhat outside our circulation area it seems unlikely that either of them ever saw the editorial in which our suggestions appeared. All that we claim credit for is having, as the poet says, shot an arrow into air. That it fell to earth nearly five years later in Boise, Idaho, was as much a surprise to us as to anyone.

Task For A Civilian

The United States now has a golden opportunity to make a new start in Germany. General Clay has asked to be relieved before July, and he deserves to have his wish fulfilled. The general himself is irreplaceable, in the sense that no Army officer now on active service has his combination of ability, authority and experience with German problems. Many generals have been mentioned as possible successors, but each would have the disadvantage of being a military man in a situation which calls insistently for a civilian in supreme charge.

Once General Clay is out of the picture, the State Department can have no further excuse for ducking its German responsibilities. We have argued repeatedly that it is time to put a civilian high commissioner in unchallenged control, subject only to the instructions of the Secretary of State and the President. It is time to end the present division of authority and to bring our policy in Germany into line with our policy in western Europe.

THE KENSINGTON STONE AND MEN OF THE LOST CRUSADE

We turn our thoughts from modern things
That our progressive science brings
To contemplate the runic stone
That links our day to ages gone.
One thought is clear—the brave heart then
Is not a stranger to our men,
For Nordic courage of our age
Springs from that ancient heritage.
And we would hold as of our own
The hand that carved that rugged stone.
Trough heat and rain, through ice and frost,
No runes upon that stone were lost.
And unrelinquished to our time
The Viking courage stands sublime.

Christian, alike, in faith were they—
"Ave Maria, save" they pray
Trusting, good faith, the Holy Word,
The ever presence of our Lord,
Feeling they not alone are there
When God, they know, is everywhere.
Fabulous trial they underwent,
Noble the zeal for rescue lent.
Brave hearts of faith that met the end
And left but a stone to find a friend!
And we will hold as of our own
The hand that carved that rugged stone.
Nor deem in vain the effort made
By heroes of the lost crusade.

Bad German

The German language daily, Staatszeitung und Herold of New York, published on February 20, the text of a German broadcast made by the Voice of America, under the title "Voice of America unmasks hypocrisy of 'Russian Peace Offensive.'"

When I first read it, I could not believe that the Voice would really broadcast anything written in such bad German. To find out whether the printed text was identical with the text actually broadcast by the Voice, I called up the editorial offices of the Staatszeitung and asked whether the published text has been taken from an English release of the State Department. This was denied and I was told that the printed German text has been received from the Voice and corresponds with the German text of the actual broadcast. There are many language mistakes and examples of extremely bad style to be found in the script.

The Voice of America's budget for the current fiscal year amounts to 11 million dollars. They are asking for even more money for the next year. Should it not be possible to hire some writers who know how to write German? JULIUS EPSTEIN.

AMA Insurance Plan

For the first time all dissident groups have outlined their legislative formula for a national health insurance program. Senator Taft would limit tax subsidized blanket coverage to so-called indigents. President Truman's rival plan uses a similar means test at a higher economic level.

Both plans provide tax grants-in-aid for complete medical care on discriminatory basis that is anything but national in character. Both plans intrude an administrative bureaucracy of time-consuming paper work between patient and doctor. Instead of a simple contractual relationship between doctor and patient, an administrative agency must certify the patient's eligibility. The doctor in turn must give valid proof that the service was performed, that the patient had valid title to the service and that the doctor's billing complies with all administrative prerequisites.

Though imperfect, the health insurance plan of the American Medical Association offers possibilities of democractic compromise. The AMA advocates extension of the nonprofit, low-cost, prepayable Blue Cross and Blue Shield insurance plans. They are essentially a form of limited liability insurance. Instead of promising complete coverage of all health risks, this program indemnifies subscribers in health services against selected hazards which unbalance the stoutest family budgets. These plans become insolvent if they attempt complete social sufficiency. They provide solvent self-help for good risks. The poor risk or the exceptionally severe catastrophe remain a no-man's-land of ignored need.

If Congress will nationalize the health risks which upset all family budgets and make noncancellable, low-cost, nationally standard insurance protection against them, available to all, our dilemma is solved. Limited liabilty means solvent insurance and less paper work. The patient rather than the doctor or the State remains in dictatorial control of the healing arts. Eligibility for benefits is determined by the incidence of an easily proven risk. By these means doctors and hospitals continue to compete for the patient's patronage. They survive by merit and superior performance rather than political preferance of bureaucratic ineptitude.

Legalized Gambling

The Oregon Legislature is now considering the legalizing of slot machines, with payment of a tax by the operators to the State treasury.

Unquestionably, vast sums of money can be raised by legalizing gambling. The millions of dollars taken in by the State of California by taxing horseracing is ample evidence. But gambling is detrimental to the morals of the people, even though it may apparently lessen their immediate economic burden. Maintaining moral standards is much more valuable to a community than adding to its economic betterment. Certainly churches would oppose this form of gambling even if the funds derived from such a measure were diverted into their own treasuries. Should the State Legislature think themselves any less responsible than the churches for our moral status?

"Rubber Stamp" Sultan

Your paper of February 28 headlined the fact that Sultan Hamud II of Ontianak, now figurehead of the Dutch puppet state of West Borneo, backs a new Dutch plan for "settling" the Indonesian question.

If this playboy-rubber stamp ever is against a proposal of the Dutch, then, sirs, you have a news items worthy of a headline.

Total War

On February 26, Miss Margaret Lambe wrote The Washington Post bewailing the fact that misguided officials of our Government are ready now to risk the sacrifice of millions of Americans just to make certain of the destruction of innocent millions abroad. She referred specifically to the article of February 22, in which Government officials stated their reasons for keeping the details of America's atom defense plan a military secret.

Miss Lambe's letter concluded: "I had thought that America's military might was to be aimed at military objectives—not at helpless populations."

During the years 1939-45 several "helpless populations" in various corners of the earth were removed merely because they had become classified as military objectives. Modern war became total war as long ago as 1918, when Ludendorff began writing his memoirs. In the dim conflicts looming across the horizons of the future, it is quite likely that destruction of all civilian industries (and regrettably a large portion of the enemy populations) may be the short cut to ultimate victory.

As for America's definite policy in regard to these "innocent millions," history has already recorded it indelibly in the Ruhr, Berlin, Tokyo, and at Hiroshima.

Dishonored Birthday

From the time I was a child, I have always felt a reverence and respect for George Washington, whose unselfish service and wise council helped to lay the firm foundation of a free land. Upon my arrival here for a visit, imagine my surprise and dismay to find in this city, of all places, that his birthday was made an occasion for an orgy of selling. Surely there are other days in the month that might be used for a sales event. I know of no such practice in the West. Why should it be here in this city where we build memorials and shrines to our national heroes? ALDA P. HARTLEY.

Resurgence In Greece

There is a resurgence of spirit in Greece. It is reminiscent of the spirit that fired the Greeks when they said "no" to Mussolini's Fascist invaders in 1940. It is amazing that Greece retains this spirit after her tragedy of the recent war followed by the even greater tragedy starting in December, 1944, when Greeks massacred Greeks to save themselves from communism.

This month witnessed a severe setback for the Communist rebels when they attempted to take the town of Florina in northern Greece. In the Peloponese, the Greek national army is doing a systematic job in cleaning up the Commie guerillas. Then there was the abortive peace attempt by the now discredited rebel leader, Markos. Zachariadis has been designated by the Cominform to succeed him.

The Greeks, well aware of the fact that they cannot achieve the maximum of their great recovery plan until the banditry has been suppressed, are determined to end this struggle in 1949 if they can. Alexander Papagos has been named commander in chief of their armies. There is now a unified command.

The Greeks realize that some Americans believe money being spent in Greece is being wasted. That in my opinion is part of the Commie line. Greeks passionately want and need the understanding of America to help them end this struggle and help them restore their economy and achieve needed social and political reforms.

As an American living in Greece I must admit that I see things a lot differently than I did before I came here. I appreciate the qualities of these people, their courage, their spirit, their determination and also their faults. It has been said the Greeks are the victims of too much democracy or too much individualism. It may be true. At the same time they believe in the things we do and they have a holy hate for communism. They have a reason to be more aware of its bloody aspects than we because it is murdering their people, abducting their children, destroying their homes and their factories.

The situation is therefore far from hopeless in Greece. Witness what is planned for the dates March 20 to 25. For six days all over Greece there will be a natonal rally with the slogan, "Work and Victory."

How can we as Americans help? Those of us with connections in Greece or with an interest in Greece could arrange to send CARE or relief parcels, remittances or just letters of encouragement and hope, just to demonstrate that we are following their struggle with sympathy and understanding.

Veterans' Pensions

Molders of public opinion have now turned their attention to veterans. Gazing into their crystal balls they bring forward predictions of "billions of dollars" in costs if the "Rankin bill" is enacted into law.

None of them quote from the estimated costs as shown in Mr. Rankin's statement when he reported on the measure. Nor did they tell the public that the death roll of World War I veterans is estimated at approximately ten thousands of individuals per month. If Mr. Rankin must be criticized, why not refute the statements he made on the basis of cold reason, not on the basis of emotional hysteria.

'Poor Man's' Divorce

By Malvina Lindsay

Sign Of The Times

THE URGE to set out and get away from it all often burgeons in the spring and usually at a time when the pinch of living is felt. Hence while legal divorce is now on the downgrade, "poor man's divorce," by desertion, is reported increasing. This had a vogue during the 1930's and was partly responsible for the lower divorce figures of that era.

Men are commonly regarded as the deserters, though it is estimated that in about 1 in 25 direct desertions the wife walks out. Just after the war many "allotment wives" deserted when Government checks quit coming. A deluge of mail pertaining to a recent bill introduced in Congress to give Federal courts power over divorced husbands who go to other States to avoid alimony payments seems to indicate that the country also has plenty of legally deserted wives.

Both men and women who take to "poor man's divorce," with or without mutual agreement, are generally supposed to have tired of the drab treadmill of domesticity and the economic struggle to make ends meet. As the going gets harder financially, some last straws, often an argument over money, sends them out of their homes headed for some open road—one that often ironically winds back to where they started from.

YET WHILE the pinch of finances often brings matters to a crisis, yet more basic conflicts usually lie back of family desertions and human disappearances. Both psychiatrists and potential novelists are pondering the strange case of the Chicago husband who on Valentine's Day two years ago walked away from a good job and a wife, and who recently was found working under another name as a dishwasher in a New York restaurant. This wife had spent $7000 on circulars and letters in the two-year search for her husband. Photographs of their reunion showed her exultant, him bewildered. His only comment was that he was "sorry" and didn't know why he did it.

Persons who disappear or desert seldom want to return to the lives they ran away from, say those experienced in handling such cases. Certainly the classic deserting husband of Somerset Maugham's Moon and Sixpence, Charles Strickland, London stockbroker, who suddenly left his wife and children unprovided for, to go to Paris to study art, never seemed to have any qualms about going back even though physical retribution, including leprosy, finally caught up with him.

It can be argued he was a genius driven by his passion for art to ignore personal responsibilities. But in most cases of family desertion, both by geniuses and nongeniuses, men and women, the cause is rooted in basic defects of human relationship. Sometimes these can be adjusted if the deserter is found, but more often the most that can be done is to get some assumption of responsibility for the children involved.

BACK OF the surface explosion over money, back of the worry over bills, back of the drab living that a flattened pocketbook brings, are human maladjustments that pave the way to desertion. Usually at the top of these is basic incompatibility of married partners, often born of hasty and irresponsible marriage. Also contributing is the widespread emotional instability and immaturity that makes human beings want to duck the hard job. Interference of in-laws, physical or mental illness, also contribute to desertion. And back of these causes is the failure of parents, teachers, society, to train children to become responsible partners in marriage.

As in legal or "rich man's divorce" it is important to catch the thing before it happens. The man or woman who runs away has more to forget and live down, more adjustment to make than if the step had not been taken. Community and church counseling services, if more general and widespread, might do much to straighten out at least the surface conflicts that lead to "poor man's divorce"—which seems destined to increase with the expected economic "leveling off." And even though separation or legal divorce may be necessary, the situation is usually made worse by efforts to run away. For the attempted escape seldom comes off, as most who have tried it have found out, and the retracing of the old road is harder.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Filibusters And The American Idea

ALTHOUGH the question before the Senate is whether to amend the rules, the issue is not one of parliamentary procedure.

LIPPMANN

It is whether there shall be a profound and far-reaching constitutional change in the character of the American Government. The proposed amendment to Rule XXII would enable two-thirds of the Senate to close the debate and force any measure, motion, or other matter to a vote. If the amendment is carried, the existing power of a minority of the States to stop legislation will have been abolished.

"Stripped of all mumbo-jumbo and flag waving," says the New York Times, the issue, is whether the country's highest legislative body will permit important measures to be kept from a vote through the activities of a few leather-throated, iron-legged members who don't want democratic decision." This is an unduly scornful and superficial way to dispose of a great constitutional problem. For the real issue is whether any majority, even a two-thirds majority, shall now assume the power to override the opposition of a large minority of the States.

IN THE American system of government the right of "democratic decision" has never been identified with majority rule as such. The genius of the American system, unique I believe among the democracies of the world, is that it limits all power—including the power of the majority. Absolute power, whether in a King, a President, a legislative majority, a popular majority, is alien to the American idea of "democratic decision."

The American idea of a democratic decision has always been that important minorities must not be coerced. When there is strong opposition, it is neither wise nor practical to force a decision. It is necessary and it is better to postpone the decision—to respect the opposition and then to accept the burden of trying to persuade it.

FOR A decision which has to be enforced against the determined opposition of large communities and regions of the country will, as Americans have long realized, almost never produce the results it is supposed to produce. The opposition and the resistance, having been overridden, will not disappear. They will merely find some other way of avoiding, evading, obstructing, or unifying the decision.

For that reason it is a cardinal principle of the American democracy that great decisions on issues that men regard as vital shall not be taken by vote of the majority until the consent of the minority has been obtained. Where the consent of the minority has been lacking, as for example in the case of the Prohibition Amendment, the "democratic decision" has produced hypocrisy and lawlessness.

THIS IS the issue in the Senate. It is not whether there shall be unlimited debates. The right of unlimited debates is merely a device, rather an awkward and tiresome device, to prevent large and determined communities from being coerced.

The issue is whether the fundamental principle of American democratic decision—that strong minorities must be persuaded and not coerced—shall be altered radically, not by constitutional amendment but by a subtle change in the rules of the Senate.

THE ISSUE has been raised in connection with the civil rights legislation. The question is whether the vindication of these civil rights requires the sacrifice of the American limitation on majority rule. The question is a painful one. But I believe the answer has to be that the rights of Negroes will in the end be made more secure, even if they are vindicated more slowly, if the cardinal principle—that minorities shall not be coerced by majorities—is conserved.

For if that principle is abandoned, then the great limitations on the absolutism and the tyranny of transient majorities will be gone, and the path will be much more open than it now is to the demagogic dictator who, having aroused a mob, destroys the liberties of the people.

Howard Alumni Cited on Charter Day . . .

The Washington Post

AWARD CEREMONY—Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson (right), president of Howard University, presents postgraduate distinguished achievement awards to three alumni. They are (from left) Leigh Whipper of New York City, Dr. Martin D. Jenkins and Mrs. Vivian J. Cook, both of Baltimore. Presentations were made at Charter Day rites yesterday

"A minority of men in the United States Senate cannot frustrate a Nation," Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (D., Minn.) told Howard University students and teachers yesterday, predicting that the achievement of full civil rights is "inevitable."

Humphrey gave the principal address at Howard University's annual Charter Day exercises, commemorating the 82-year-old university's establishment in 1867 by Congressional Act.

The Minnesota Senator, given a standing ovation by the more than 600 student and faculty members present, told them "the trend is toward liberation", despite "a last desperate resistance to the age-old drive for full liberation by those who would ignore a golden rule so that they can keep a Senate rule."

Three graduates of Howard were presented with the Annual Alumni Awards for postgraduate achievement at the services, held in the Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel.

The awards, presented by Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard, went to:

Mrs. Vivian Johnson Cook, principal of the Harvey Johnson Junior High School in Baltimore. Mrs. Cook was vice principal of Dunbar High School here from 1941 to 1947.

Dr. Martin D. Jenkins, recently appointed president of Morgan State College in Baltimore, for his contributions to the field of education. A Howard University professor from 1938 to 1948, Dr. Jenkins aided in the National Survey of Higher Education among Negroes, 1940-41, and in a 1946 survey of higher education in Maryland.

Leigh Whipper, stage, screen and radio artist of New York City, for his lifelong fight "for the right of Negroes to play in roles consistent with their ability."

Axis Sally's Passport Story Is Weakened

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Defense testimony that Mis Mildred E. (Axis Sally) Gillars was dissuaded from leaving Germany by lack of a passport yesterday was weakened in District Court when it was shown the witness had told the FBI a different story.

The witness, Erin Christiani, 44, stalked gravely to the stand attired in a black leather aviator-type coat.

After removing it on instruction from Federal Judge Edward M. Curran, he told the court in guttural accents that he had been the immediate superior of Miss Gillars on the German radio system up to 1943.

He said that "a fortnight before the United States entered the war, Miss Gillars asked me 'what am I to do?'

"She wanted to leave but she couldn't because she had lost her passport. Someone had taken it off from her. She said there was nothing to expect from America and that she loved the United States but she liked her duty in Berlin because people told her she was very good.

(It had previously been testified that up until 1943 Miss Gillars participated only in "entertainment" programs).

"I said," Christiani continued, "'Mildred I don't think there will outbreak a war . . . It is impossible for German forces to land in America and Roosevelt has said he didn't want to send his soldiers to Europe. Perhaps you have a better future in Germany.'"

After the witness had repeated the testimony to Prosecutor John M. Kelley jr. in cross-examination, Kelley placed in evidence and later read to the jury a statement made by the witness to FBI agents when he arrived here from Germany last Saturday.

Passport Not Mentioned

This statement described the conversation with Miss Gillars but made no mention of the passport matter and quoted Miss Gillars as telling Christiani she was in doubt about leaving for America because she was in love with an engineer named "Paul."

"I was astonished when she told me she was in doubt," Christiani's statement read. The document also quoted Miss Gillars as saying she had "no prospects in the United States but could look forward to a bright future in Germany."

Questioning by Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin brought out that the witness had signed the statement after being closeted with FBI agents for 13½ hours after his arrival here.

Earlier testimony by Christiani told of Miss Gillars' being temporarily relieved of her radio job when, upon hearing of the Pearl Harbor attack, she referred to the Japanese as "yellow monkeys."

(This incident, Miss Gillars had testified, led to her signing an oath of allegiance to Germany before she could get her job back.)

During the morning session, the gray-haired 48-year-old defendant defied Judge Curran's instructions to answer questions pertaining to Stella Koischwitz, daughter of Miss Gillars' dead lover, Dr. Max O. Koischwitz, former Nazi radio official.

On trial for her life, the defendant apparently decided to run the risk of a contempt of court citation, when she stubbornly asked the judge after repeated commands to answer "what happens if I refuse?"

As Judge Curran again began pressing for an answer, Kelley switched to a new line of questioning.

Kelley Angers Defendant

At the start of the day's proceedings, Kelley had angered the defendant by delving deeper into her relationship with Koischwitz.

"Isn't it a fact," asked Kelley, "that when you and Prof Koischwitz declared your love for each other, his wife was pregnant and bearing his fourth child?"

"I found out about it the day before the child was born," Miss Gillars declared.

"You knew he was married?" Kelley pursued. "Are these ad hominen (Latin for personal) tactics going to be pursued? Is that the only kind of tactics you have, Mr. Kelley?" snapped the defendant.

The trial is slated to be resumed today with the defense calling on Johannes Schmidt-Hansen, former German radio official, who is expected to testify concerning Miss Gillars' alleged oath of allegiance. Schmidt-Hansen was reported en route to the United States yesterday.

Poverty Tale Frees Cripple

its initiated an audit and almost before they started, Embrey told them: "You don't have to look any longer; I took the money."

A one-time charity patient in a home for cripples, Embrey related how he persevered to graduate from Richard Montgomery High School. "I then went to work in a shoe shop for a dollar a week," he said.

At that time, he would hitchhike home. Judge Woodward asked Embrey from the bench if he remembered being picked up at times by him. Embrey said he did.

"We never had much money, but we did the best we could on what father made," Embrey's sister had testified earlier. Police said the father was a caretaker.

Embrey said he first began to dip into beer sales receipts when he became incensed by the "catty remarks" of the school children. And then he met the girl, an unidentified Washington divorcee, fell in love and proposed marriage which, he said, was accepted.

Because she liked expensive night clubs he took her to them weekly, he said. He also bought her a fur coat and each time he called he took her flowers or candy. When he was arrested, the girl broke their engagement, Embrey declared.

In addition to the expensive courtship, Embrey said he frequently took $30 and $40 worth of groceries to a sister in Virginia who has 13 children.

When the defense rested, the prosecution which had merely put two witnesses on the stand to establish the embezzlement, did not cross-examine the defendant.

Judge Woodward then quietly said he could not send the man, paralyzed in both legs, to jail because of his affliction. "That would be torture," he said.

Pointing out that the missing funds had been made good by a bonding firm, Judge Woodward observed "he has hurt himself more than anyone else; the pressure of life and his family were too much for this unfortunate boy."

When the jurist imposed an indefinite suspended sentence, he admonished Embrey to "go on home and behave yourself." As the defendant reached for his crutches, unbelieving, eight of his brothers and sisters, who were in court, rushed to him and they embraced.

D. C. Medical Society Rejects Poll on $25 AMA Assessment

District Medical Society members in meeting last night voted down a proposal to poll their membership over whether or not the physicians should pay the $25 American Medical Association assessment.

Though a "sizable majority" reportedly voted to table the proposal, discussion preceding the vote delayed the guest speaker's address a full half hour beyond its scheduled start.

The AMA House of Delegates, in November, voted a $25 assessment on each active member of the organization to create an "educational fund." Opponents of the measure have termed it a slush fund" to fight national compulsory health insurance.

Though last night's action was taken in closed meeting of the society, some members freely discussed its development with reporters.

One physician who opposed the assessment said that last night's attempts failed largely because "we have virtually been promised" no penalties will be imposed on members who refuse to pay the assessment.

Another said that those who spoke for the resolution asking for a poll lost votes "because they used the occasion to attack the AMA."

"We are not against the AMA," he explained. "We are only against this particular assessment. And our opposition does not mean that we favor the President's plan for compulsory insurance."

The meeting was later thrown open for a talk by Tracy Voorhees, Assistant Secretary of the Army, who discussed "Federal Medical Services."

Voorhees confined his remarks to the report of the committee on Federal Medical Services of the Hoover Commission, which he headed. The committee made public its report on December 26, recommending integration of medical facilities of the armed forces, Veterans Administration, United States Public Health Service and other Federal agencies with each other and with community facilities.

VA Hospital Cut Opposed By Legion

Elimination of 16,000 beds from proposed Veterans' Administration hospitals was attacked yesterday by the American Legion conference on national rehabilitation.

Robert M. McCurdy, assistant city manager of Pasadena, Calif., and vice chairman of the Legion's rehabilitation commission, described the suggested cutback of hospital facilities "as damn poor policy."

He told 600 delegates at the Statler Hotel that if the American Medical Association did not join with the Legion in attacking the decrease, the Legion should reconsider its stand against the President's national health program, now attacked by the AMA.

McCurdy said "if AMA is going to get tough, we ought to get tough, too."

In the start of a three-day session, the conference broke up into discussion groups which considered the VA and rehabilitation, medical and hospital services, and hospital construction. Omar W. Clark, assistant VA administrator, and F. H. Dryden, assistant VA administrator for construction and staff, met with the Legion delegates.

VA Administrator Carl Gray will address the conference at 1:30 p. m. today.

Child Behavior Follows Laws

dictable and measurable, arrived at by a natural process of law. Similar patterns are seen in the child's posture, he said.

Although, he said, all stages of growth are important, Dr. Gesell illustrated the significance of understanding growth with the case of a 2½-year-old child.

"He is just becoming aware of the two-sidedness of things," Dr. Gesell said. "He already knows one side, but is learning that people have two names, rooms have four walls, chairs can move, and things aren't always what they seem to be.

"Parents think he can't make up his mind, but in reality he is beset by doubts.

"When Emerson, a great philosopher, talked about dualism in man, he was in reality talking about the same problem in an adult that the 2½-year-old child faces," Dr. Gesell said.

Stages Have Characteristics

If parents realize the doubts in the mind of their 2½-year-old child, they can understand him better, just as a psychiatrist understands his patients better when he learns of their doubts, he said.

Each growth stage has its characteristics, he said, and by understanding the characteristics, parents understand the child, the child is well adjusted and the world benefits.

Dr. Gesell's lecture was sponsored by the George Washington University and Catholic University Chapters of Sigma Xi.

Fairfax County Answers Suit by Falls Church

Fairfax County has answered the Falls Church suit asking that the schools in the new city be turned over to it, and the suit probably will be set for hearing at the opening of the new Circuit Court term on March 21.

The answer, filed Tuesday in the name of the county board of supervisors and the county school board, denied the city's claim that its new status as a second-class city entitled it to ownership and operation of its schools.

Corning Deplores Negro School Cut

Elimination of the proposed new Spingarn High School for Negroes from the District budget was deplored yesterday by School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning.

The action, affirmed by the full House, made $1,187,39 available to the general fund. The school is expected to cost an eventual 3.6 millions.

Postponement of construction of Spingarn High School means placing "one or more" of the city's three Negro high schools on part-time instruction, Corning told the Board of Education.

He said the cut is "extremely serious" and "to the detriment of the colored youth of the city."

Spingarn is to be built at 24th st. and Benning rd.

He said that if the high schools go on part-time they will be in danger of losing their accreditation. Cardozo, at present, is operating on what Corning described as a "triple relay program" to accommodate the students.

House Passes D. C. Budget

ing all District school appropriations from the bill on ground that there is no law for the District's segregated school system.

Representative Bates took issue, saying that nowhere in the money bill was there any provision for segregation. Representatives Church and Rankin sided with Bates. Representative Eugene J. Keogh (D., N. Y.) in the chair, overruled Marcantonio.

Representative Jacob K. Javits (R., N. Y.) after ruling, declared that the main point raised by Marcantonio is that the schools and recreation setups in the District are segregated when "Congress is supposed to stand fast for equal rights for all."

The bitter civil rights showdown finally came on a proposal by Representative Adam Clayton Powell (D., N. Y.) Negro member of the House, to bar use of any funds in the District money bill by any agency that segregates local citizens on account of race, color or national origin.

But a new note was struck when backers of the Powell move described it as the first test since the election of what the House would do about the party campaign platforms and cardidates' pledges on the civil rights issue.

Fighting was cut short when Representative Bates moved at the end of some 0 minutes that debate on the owell amendment be stopped at once. The House voted with him 94 to 34.

"This is the first time," said Powell, "that this Congress has had the opportunity to go on record in regard to the campaign promises made by both parties on civil rights.

"In the Capital of the United States, where the best and not the worst in American life should be on exhibition, loyal Americans are prevented, not by law, but by practices condoned by Congress, from enjoying equal opportunities in education, recreation, employment and other facilities."

Representative Rankin told the House the Powell move was an attempt to stir up "race riots, race discord and mob violence in the District."

He said it would destroy the District school system.

"I appeal to the white Americans in this House to vote this amendment down," said Rankin.

Representative Andrew J. Biemiller (D., Wis.) declared "this is the first test of whether we mean business when we write political platforms, campaign on those platforms, and get elected on them." He said segregation in the Nation's Capital "has long been a disgrace to the Nation."

As the question of final passage neared, Marcantonio moved that the bill be recommitted with instructions to write the Powell amendment into it. Such a motion would have forced a roll call. It was forestalled by Representative John Taber (R., N. Y.), who offered a general motion to recommit the bill. With but one motion to recommit it allowed by House rules, the voice vote that killed Taber's motion also spiked Marcantonio's plan.

Slum Racial Ban Defeated In Chicago

Chicago, March 2 (AP).—A proposal to ban racial and religious discrimination in Chicago slum clearance projects was defeated by the city council today after Mayor Martin H. Kennelly came out against it. The vote was 31 to 13.

Kennelly told the council the measure would "delay, if not completely prevent, the rebuilding of Chicago slums." He said "it breaks faith with the people who voted for his whole program."

During the debate on the proposal opponents contended large prospective investors in Chicago housing would refuse to build under such a ban because of fear of litigation.

Chicago voters aapproved a 30 million dollar bond issue to finance the housing program in the November, 1947, election.

Reeves Urges Real Home Rule

The only way Montgomery County's new charter and county manager form of government will work is to give it responsibility for all county matters, John R. Reeves, member of the all-Republican county delegation to the Maryland House of Delegates, said last night.

He spoke before the Silver Spring Board of Trade at a dinner at Indian Spring Country Club in support of current bills to transfer all functions of the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission, to the council.

"We will never get enforcement of zoning regulations as long as there is diversified control," he declared.

He said he did not support the charter but added: "If you believe in home rule then give the elected officials all the elements of it."

E. Brooke Lee, vice chairman of the Park and Planning Commission and long a Democratic leader in the county, charged that the GOP delegation in office three years has yet to initiate legislation that would eliminate or extend functions of the bi-county park and planning commission.

"The question is all over who appoints them," he said.

Lee attributed the county's wealth and gross growth to "good planning." He said he saw no excuse for change except for "political reasons."

Falls Church Officials Hit By C.ofC. Head

Falls Church Chamber of Commerce President Francis A. Wagner yesterday charged the Falls Church City Council and mayor with "poor planning and lack of foresight" in city affairs and with pushing the city "completely overboard financially."

Wagner urged that Mayor Albert M. Orem and the nine-member city council be voted out of office in the city's June elections, and said most of the 100 members of the chamber of commerce backed his stand.

He focused his ire on the city's proposal to annex about seven square miles of adjacent Fairfax County territory declaring "our city's financial structure is being taxed to the limit" already to meet "the minimum costs" of operation, and the annexation would put the city "further behind the eight-ball."

Wagner criticized the city's present attempt to regain control of its schools, now operated by Fairfax County, and asserted the present "log jam at city hall" is a direct result of the council "going head-on into matters without preliminary planning."

Mayor Orme called Wagner's broadside an "attempt to undermine the reputation for progressive action achieved by this city." He said the criticism of him and the council was "unsupported."

As to annexation, he said it would "broaden the city's tax base," and make for sounder area planning and deevlopment. He said the school issue was "forced upon the city" by Fairfax when the county took over the city schools in 1942.

Virginia Seeks Pollution End municipalities and communities even though the State has no territorial claims on waters of the river.

Unlike Arlington and Alexandria, Fairfax County empties its raw sewage—about 2,500,000 gallons daily—directly into the Potomac.

Plans for a Fairfax County sewage treatment plant are now being prepared and details of a bond issue by which the county's Sanitary District No. 1 would finance construction are being developed.

Early Bond Issue Vote

Fairfax County officials said they hope to have sufficient data assembled within 60 days to proceed with plans for a vote on the bond issue.

Alexandria empties about five million gallons of raw sewage daily into Hunting Creek and Four Mile Run and it is carried into the Potomac.

Alexandria's problem is one of finances. City plans for a sewage treatment plan have been prepared and have been approved by the State Water Control Board, but the necessary finances are lacking and the city's bonded indebtedness is almost up to the legal limit.

Arlington County has a sewage treatment plant of 1936 vintage, but the growth of the county has made it obsolete. As a result, the county plant treats six million gallons of sewage daily but another five million gallons go untreated into Four-Mile Run and then into the Potomac River.

Addition in Planning Stage

Since 1946, the county has had in the planning stage a $1,250,000 addition to the present plant. The new facilities would meet the needs of a population of 200,000. At the present time, the county has a population of 123,000.

The bulk of the sewage emptied into the Potomac comes from the District, between 160 and 165 million gallons daily. However, this is partially treated sewage, with 50 per cent of the solids removed.

House Passes Bills

Two Virginians would be able to take to court their claims for oyster bed damage under bills passed by the House and sent to the Senate yesterday.

Committee reports on the bills show that both John E. Parker, Milton Village, and Harry W. Sharpley, Greenbackville, claim damages from sewage.

Parker has contended oyster grounds he leased in the Warwick River, Warwick County, were polluted by sewage from Camp Patrick. He claims $17,750 property damage.

Rev. D. C. Irwin to Speak

Fairfax Wife of 'Lonely Heart' Fled, 'Frightened'

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Miss Esther Henne, 41, Pennsylvania teacher, who in Fairfax, Va., was married to Raymond Fernandez, confessed "lonely hearts" killer, yesterday told The Washington Post she had first been "suspicious" and later "frightened of my life" before she left him a month after the February, 1948, wedding.

Meanwhile, women from all parts of the country called Michigan authorities to tell how they, too, had been "bilked" by the 34-year-old alleged killer and his partner, 200-pound Mrs. Martha Beck.

Fernandez and Mrs. Beck are being held in jail in Grand Rapids, while State authorities consider transferring trial of their case to New York. They have confessed they beat and strangled Mrs. Janet Fay and buried her body in a Queens County, N. Y., cellar, according to police.

They also are said to have confessed to the slaying of a mother and child in a western Michigan town. The bodies were discovered early this week. Michigan authorities are considering the transfer because Michigan law does not permit capital punishment.

Miss Henne, reached by telephone in Royersford, Pa., where she teaches at the Pennhurst State School, said she first became suspicious of Fernandez after their marriage, when they, along with Mrs. Beck, lived in a New York apartment. She said the building superintendent told her that all sorts of women had been "running into the apartment."

She said she became frightened when she learned that the apartment had once belonged to a Mrs. Jane Thompson, who lived there with her aged mother, a Mrs. Wilson.

Miss Henne said the superintendent told her that Fernandez and Mrs. Thompson had gone to Spain on a honeymoon trip, and that Mrs. Thompson had never returned.

"I asked him about her," she said. "First he told me she had died in a railroad wreck. Then he told me she had died of a heart attack. When I asked him a third time," she said, "he told me that she had died of infectious diarrhea."

(Michigan authorities said the FBI is investigating Mrs. Thompson's death in Cadiz, Spain.)

Miss Henne said the superintendent later told her that after Fernandez returned, he had "taken all of her money and things, and thrown Mrs. Wilson out." (Mrs. Wilson is reported to be in a Wilmington, N. C., nursing home, according to press dispatches.)

Miss Henne, who described Mrs. Beck as a "horrible woman, cruel and vulgar," said she was so frightened by this time that she made up her mind to leave both Fernandez and Mrs. Beck.

She said she waited until Fernandez had gone to work one day, then got a friend in the apartment, and told Mrs. Beck in her presence that she was going to go back to Pennsylvania.

She said she asked Mrs. Beck to accompany her to the train. "I wanted her to think I really was going back home," she said.

Once at the station with Mrs. Beck, Miss Henne said, she slipped through a southbound train, and caught a cab to a New York hotel, where she registered. The following day, she visited New York District Attorney Frank Hogan, and told him that she thought her husband "might have been involved in some murders."

She also asked the district attorney's office to help her recover her car, which Fernandez had been driving.

Took Her Car Away

She said she "didn't get much satisfaction" from the district attorney's office, and later went back to the apartment where she saw the car parked in front. She said she drove it off, and parked it in an uptown garage.

Next, she said, she went to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, where she repeated her story. She later went to the Legal Aid Bureau in New York before returning to her Pennsylvania home in Laureldale.

Miss Henne described Fernandez as "very much the gentleman," and "courteous and polite" during their brief courtship.

When she accepted his proposal of marriage in February, 1948, Miss Henne said, Fernandez told her "Virginia was a "good place" to get married in. He also told her Mrs. Beck would accompany them on their motor trip from New York to Virginia as a witness.

Miss Henne, who says she now plans to divorce Fernandez, said the whole wedding trip took only about 24 hours. The couple received blood tests in Arlington County, went to Alexandria to inquire about transportation to Fairfax County, stopped in Falls Church police station to ask about another witness, and finally reached Fairfax courthouse, where they were married by Thomas P. Chapman, jr., court clerk.

Back in New York, at an apartment at 656 W. 139th st., Miss Henne said, the three settled down to living together. Fernandez, she said, had a job as "some sort of mechanic" at the Idlewild Airport, but Mrs. Beck "didn't do anything but just stay at the house."

At first all went well. Then Miss Henne discovered that the pair had stolen $500 in cash from her dresser. "Then they were both cruel to me. They were always fighting and fussing at me. Then they got to fighting between themselves," she said.

After the theft of the money, Miss Henne said, she got a lawyer, who threatened Fernandez and Mrs. Beck with legal action if they did not repay it. An agreement was made for repayment at the rate of $50 a month, she said.

After she left Fernandez, Miss Henne said, the money came pretty regularly for a couple of months, then stopped. She said she went to see one of Fernandez's sisters in Astoria, Long Island, N. Y., and told her about a woman Fernandez knew in Philadelphia who was pregnant.

She said payments were resumed shortly thereafter. She said there still is a $200 balance on the money owed her.

Last November "a man from Washington" came to see her, Miss Henne said, asking her for information on Fernandez's whereabouts. She said he would not tell her why he was investigating her husband.

In Michigan, Kent County Prosecutor Roger C. McMahon said that the FBI also has been asked to check into the death of Myrtle Young, 42, of Green Forest, Ark., who had married a man in Chicago as 'Raymond C. Martin." She said she met him through a matrimonial agency.

McMahon said both Fernandez and Mrs. Beck were "very calm" in discussing their alleged killings of two women and a young child.

Dear to Hearts Of 5-Year-Olds

By Richard L. Coe

"SO DEAR TO MY HEART," at Keith's, makes no bones about being as sentimental and nostalgic as a picture can get. Some of its scenes are truly moving. The picture on the whole is for youngsters and for those who revel in a bucolic past.

This, as you probably know, is Walt Disney's adaptation of Sterling North's book, which fondly recalled the pleasures of an Indiana boyhood. There are a few cartoon sequences, but mostly the film concerns Bobby Driscoll's affection for a young black ram.

That Disney's recent films have drifted from sentiment into sentimentality has been discussed before. The early pristine charm has given away to a saccharine, cloying quality. As the pages of a childhood album turn, one finds the pinkest pinks, the bluest blues, a coy, surfeiting sweetness, the lack of which was the miracle of the early Disney.

I don't think this necessarily happens because the master cartoonist is now concentrating on lovable human beings. His Indiana folk are little different from the Hoosiers of other pictures, though this cast is as perfect as one can ask for what Disney is trying to do. The fact remains, his cartoons have lost his distinguishing touch.

With John Beal's voice as the adult Bobby Driscoll was to become, we drift back into the quiet farmland of Indiana at the start of the century. The orphaned Bobby lives at Fulton Corners with his widowed grandmother, Beulah Bondi. When a little black lamb arrives and is treated with disdain by its mother, Bobby makes the woolly creature his pet. His uncle, Burl Ives, helps him wheedle grandma into entering the ram at the Pike County fair. Though it doesn't win a blue ribbon, his care for the pet brings him a special award.

"SO DEAR TO MY HEART." RKO Radio release produced by Walt Disney. Adapted from the story by Sterling North, by John Tucker Battle, Maurice Rapf and Ted Sears. Music by Ticker Freeman, Eliot Daniel, Don Raye, Robert Wells and Gene DePaul. Produced in cartoons and "live action" with Technicolor. Photographed by Winton C. Hoch. At Keith's.

LIVE ROLES BY: Burl Ives, Beulah Bondi, Harry Carey, Luana Patten, Bobby Driscoll, Raymond Bond, Walter Soderling, Mat Willis and Spelman B. Collins.

VOICES BY: John Beal, Ken Carson, Bob Stanton and the Rhythmaires.

It's for the Youngsters

Scattered throughout the film are brief cartoon sequences illustrating those postcard moral precepts that youngsters of a half century ago used to collect. They serve an admirable purpose for the youngsters who form the audience. Disney undoubtedly designed his picture to please.

In fact, I found the wide-eyed attention of the 5-year-old lad behind me considerably more charming than most of what went on up on the screen. Which undoubtedly is what Disney wanted.

As a disenchanted adult, I found the scene of Driscoll feeding a juicy red apple to the era's great horse, Dan Patch, moving, and I also enjoyed an impromptu square dance in grandma's house.

The score includes a happy moment with Burl Ives singing "Lavender Blue" and "It's Whatcha Do with Whatcha Got," which have captured both the airlanes and the record world.

GUY MADISON'S arrival and the opening of Hyattsville's stock company at the Arcade Theater have been postponed to make further alterations in the building to comply with fire regulations . . . Those who've written for mail orders are asked to hold everything; they will be forwarded tickets for corresponding performances when the opening is set . . . Producer Dean Goodman meanwhile is lining up succeeding productions and hopes to include Tennessee Williams' "Summer and Smoke," which played Gotham last fall.

SATURDAY'S opening of the Sportsmen's and Outdoors Show at the Armory will include a 12-act stage and tank show for each afternoon and evening of the 9-day engagement . . . What have showfolk to do with such a show? . . . Well, there'll be retrieving dogs (some day I'm going to train pheasants and quail to point bird dogs, and that will be a thing), a talking crow, a singing bear, a lady fly-cast champ and a passel of beach beauties.

WTOP is in a tizzy for the Washington broadcasts by two of the CBS net's best bets . . . Jack Carson, the Friday night man, will be playing his radio show a full week on the Warner stage beginning March 11 . . . Spike Jones, who switches from Sunday to Saturday night airings March 12, will be in town for two performances at Constitution Hall Saturday and Sunday, March 12 and 13 . . . Don't ask me how to watch the boys broadcast . . . Best way to catch them will be on the stage of the Brothers Warner or the platform of the Daughters Revolutionary.

DISNEY'S "LIVE" FRIENDS—Burl Ives, Luana Patton and Bobby Driscoll have the leads in the latest Disney offering at Keith's, "So Dear to My Heart." Adapted from Sterling North's popular book, the film is mostly live action with a few cartoon sequences

Callaway Leads Choral Group In Literature's Masterworks

By Paul Hume

The Library of Congress welcomed something different in its concerts last night.

There, under the auspices of the Whittall Foundation, Paul Callaway led his chamber choral group in two masterworks of the literature, and in folk songs by Brahms. Choral writings of Bach and Palestrina, with which the evening began, overshadowed everything that came later. Any music placed after these two giants of polyphonic style would be overshadowed.

The program opened in fashion most appropriate for Ash Wednesday, with Palestrina's setting of the Stabat Mater, divided for two separate choruses. Callaway is a master among masters in his control of choral technique and conducting. He achieved beautifully balanced divisions from his double dozen singers. The texture of sound they produced was a constant wonder, and their precision in pitch and enunciation was admirable.

The dolorus wonders of the Stabat Mater unfolded in great procession as the harmonic subtleties of the writing moved from verse to verse. It was a noble reading throughout.

Bach's unaccompanied motets are as difficult as anything in all of vocal music to sing. There are those who will tell you that of these, "Sing to the Lord" is much the hardest. In any case, it is a terrific piece to attempt. That Callaway's chorus overcame it in as fine style as they did last night is to say much for them.

Its contrapuantal tricks were made clear, and what is far more important, ont could hear the outline of the whole as it grew from stage to stage. If some lines were less than crystal clear, we must lay that almostas much to ach'e demands as to the problems of singers in our own time. The motet is one of the invincible paens of praise and was sung in that vein.

Post-intermission brought folk songs in the mellowest mood from Brahms. A dozen for women's voices and piano reminded us that Brahms wrote too much music for some women's choruses he directed. Another set of 12 plus 1 seemend a bit more Brahms in one vein than was necessary. Since most of the songs have from three to six verses, it would perhaps have been kinder to cut some of the repetition. As it was, the songs lasted longer than any of Brahms' four symphonies, though they hold little of the interest of the larger works.

Callaway gave sympathetic support to his ladies as well as impeccable direction to the whole evening.

Geico Changes Include New Board Head

By S. Oliver Goodman

A new board chairman, two more directors and four new officers were elected at the annual meeting of Government Employes Insurance Co. of Washington, it was announced yesterday.

The changes, as reported by Leo Goodwin, sr., president, who was reelected, are as follows:

Benjamin Graham, president of the New York investment firm of Graham-Newman Corp., was elected Geico board chairman. He succeeds Francis M. Shea, attorney, who resigned due to pressure of private activities.

William K. Jacobs, jr., and Robert J. Marony, both of New York, were added to the board of directors. Jacobs is a director of Briggs Filtration Co. of Bethesda, Md., and is a financial consultant. Marony is a vice president of Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad.

Newly elected officers are Leo Goodwin, jr., vice president; A. E. Kraus, assistant vice president; A. K. Hatfield, assistant treasurer, and Leonard L. Lightcap, assistant secretary. Reelected officers, in addition to the elder Goodwin, are David L. Kreeger, vice president and general counsel; Jerome A. Newman, treasurer, and Warren Nigh, secretary. All directors were reelected.

PROMOTIONS: Two promotions were announced yesterday by C. F. Jacobsen, president of the National Metropolitan Bank. Thomas H. Reynolds, formerly an assistant trust officer, was elevated to trust officer, and George M. McLearen was promoted to assistant trust officer.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: James A. Gray, a past president of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., has been named board chairman, succeeding the late S. Clay Williams . . . Matthew J. Plodinec has been appointed acting controller of Trans World Airline . . . H. L. Exley is the new assistant to the general manager of Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, succeeding Alfred O. Herman who retired yesterday after 35 years service . . . Rulon E. Rasmussen, F. Preston Pulliam and Charlton E. Gnadt of the Washington office of New York Life Insurance Co. will attend the 104th anniversary convention in April as a result of their high sales production . . . Theodore H. Mecke, jr., has been named assistant public relations manager of the Ford Motor Co.'s southeastern region.

NEW ASSOCIATION: Owners of 28 Washington liquor stores have formed a new association to be known as "Value Liquor Stores." President is Ben Cohen. Other officers include: Sam Allen, vice president, and Harvey Blumenthal, secretary-treasurer. Directors are Meyer Blank, Al Livingston, Isador Laskin, Jacob Miller and Joe Caplan.

REALTY BONDS: The Arnott-Baker realty bond price averages showed that the trend of real estate bonds turned downward in February for the first time in several months. The price decline was 0.4 per cent from the January level. The index now contains 40 issues—8 hotels, 8 apartment hotels, 8 apartment buildings and 16 office buildings. The average price of the index's 40 issues was $747 at the close of trading yesterday, compared with $750 on January 31.

FINANCING: New bond financing in February totaled $290,561,000, smallest for any month in a year but largest for any February since 1940. State and municipal issues totaled $143,521,000; public utilities, $71,500,000; railroads, $52,540,000; industrial, three million odllars, and miscellaneous, 20 million dollars.

BANK FIGURES: Highlights of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond's weekly report on 17 member Washington banks:

	Week-Ended February 23	Week Ended February 16
Total loans	$225,795,000	$225,394,000
Real estate loans	77,104,000	77,016,000
Total assets	994,752,000	1,007,377,000
Demand deposits	749,699,000	764,263,000
Time deposits	178,704,000	178,149,000

PLEA: The North American Co. has asked the SEC for permission to keep control of the 25-million-dollar Missouri Power & Light Co. The New York holding company proposes to transfer its holdings of Missouri common stock to Union Electric. By controlling Union Electric, North American would indirectly keep control of Missouri Power.

EARNINGS: United Fruit Co. reported net income of $59,740,231 or $6.81 a common share for 1948, compared with $54,140,794 or $6.17 a share in 1947. Other earnings reports:

Bank Loans Display Another Small Drop

Business loans declined for the sixth consecutive week during the seven days ended February 23, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday.

A 43 million-dollar drop was recorded in a report covering commercial, industrial and agricultural loans by Federal Reserve member banks in the Nation's leading cities.

The drop, as in previous week, centered in the western part of the country.

Long Island Railroad Takes Bankruptcy

New York, March 2 (U.P.).—The 115-year-old Long Island Railroad, biggest commuter line in the Nation and the object both of great disgust and deep affection from its 200,000 daily riders, declared bankruptcy today and was ordered into receivership.

The Long Island said it was broke, owed 55 million dollars to the Pennsylvania Railroad and faced a big operating deficit this year even though it had been given permission only yesterday to raise its commuter fares 20 to 33 per cent.

United States District Judge Harold Kennedy approved the bankruptcy petition and announced he would appoint trustees on March 11 to continue operation of the line, which serves all of Long Island.

Perennially plagued by sea gulls in its power transformers, dice games in the aisles of its cars, cows on the track and crotchety conductors, the Long Island reached a peak of abuse in the "big snow of '47" when a number of its trains left the city never to reach their destination.

U. S. Backing Monetary Fund

By The Associated Press.

The United States is backing the World Monetary Fund in the Fund's differences with the Union of South Africa over the price of gold, Secretary of the Treasury Snyder said yesterday.

Snyder made it clear that the U. S. wants the world price of gold held at $35 an ounce. That is the official U. S. rate to which the Fund ties its valuation of the currencies of its 47 member countries.

"We are supporting the Monetary Fund," Snyder told reporters when asked about the statement of South Africa's finance minister Nicholaas Havenga that the $35 an ounce rate is a "fiction that can't long endure."

The Fund is disputing with South Africa, the world's biggest gold producer country, over plans by that county to sell gold at prices about $6.50 over the $35 rate to a London brokerage firm.

South Africa insists that the Fund has no authority over the prices charged because the gold will be used only for manufacturing goods and not for speculation, hoarding or other money purposes.

The Fund does not contend it has any say about gold sales for industrial or artistic use, but objects that the South African arrangement does not provide "adequate safeguards" to prevent the gold from being used for hoarding.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 2 (AP).—Corn sank further on the Board of Trade today as movement of the cash grain from the country increased. Action of the yellow cereal held down other grains most of the day, but wheat moved upward rapidly in fairly active dealings during the last hour.

May corn met most selling, dropping more than 2 cents at one time. Part of the pressure came from hedging by cash houses, which reported purchases of cash grain on a to-arrive basis of 230,000 bushels. This followed upon yesterday's bookings of 200,000 bushels.

Wheat closed ⅛ to 1 cent higher, corn was ⅛@1⅛ lower, oats were ⅜ lower to ¼ higher, rye was unchanged to ¼ higher, soybeans were ⅛ to 1 cent lower and lard was 2 to 5 cents a hundred pounds lower.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., MARCH 2.—Back in 1934, Promoter Mike Jacobs sensed something of fistic greatness in a grim-faced colored lad who was fighting around Detroit and sent his agents to tell the boy to keep on leveling. There would be a shot at the title for him some day, despite his color, Jacobs promised.

Not since 1915 had a Negro figured in a heavyweight title fight, but Mike Jacobs was opening new vistas for young Joe Louis. The limits were off, Jacobs said. "You don't have to lose to white fighters," he told Louis. Three years later he was the champion of the world.

POVICH

Louis had the title, and Jacobs had tapped a vein of black gold. The Twentieth Century Sporting Club took more than two million dollars in profits out of Louis' title defenses. Little did Jacobs dream then that the Negro lad he had sponsored out of preliminary ranks some day would move into the front office as a promoter in his own right and reduce Jacobs' own firm to secondary importance. But that is what happened yesterday with Louis' decision to retire as champion and branch out as a fistic impressario. Jacobs says he can't meet that kind of promotional competition. "I guess I'll retire," he said.

YOU MIGHT SAY that Louis made a decision to get out of fighting and into the fight business. The latter holds out promise of greater longevity. If Louis' decision was somewhat sudden, it was no less sensible. He's in the perfect spot to control the title for years, and drag down the profits from promotions.

Jacobs taught him the tactics. He showed Louis how to tie up fighters with contracts giving him exclusive call on their services. In naming Joe Walcott and Ezzard Charles as the men who would fight for his vacated title, with National Boxing Association approval, Louis certainly took the precaution to bind them to fight for him exclusively, and any future challenger must subscribe to the same conditions.

Wresting promotional control of the title away from Louis and his Chicago backers, Jimmy Norris and Art Wirtz, may be impossible. If Walcott and Charles are not great fighters, at least they are the best of the current crop, and Louis has them hog-tied to contracts. With the move he has blacked out any rival firms.

AS USUAL, Louis made his latest move the honest way; he didn't break away from Jacobs, his benefactor and good friend, until he was done as a fighter. As long as he stayed in the ring, Louis had promised, he would fight for Jacobs. That he did . . . but there was no claim on him against the day when Louis would decide to retire from active fighting.

And it was a frank statement that he issued when he announced his decision to quit. "I'm glad to retire," he said. "It takes a great load off my mind. I could see that I couldn't fight any more, and rather than lose my title in the ring I decided to quit." No double talk. He said he knew he was through.

Most persons had beaten Louis to that latter idea. What they saw of him in his last two fights, with Jersey Joe Walcott, was the convincer. He was down three times in those 26 rounds, had only one good round, the one in which he knocked Walcott out in the second fight. There was side opinion that he had blown his title in the first Walcott fight and was lucky to get the judges' decision.

GENE TUNNEY was acclaimed as a smart man when he retired voluntarily at the top of the heap. Louis must be credited with equal intelligence in that respect. There was no call for him to be knocked loose from his title inside the ring. The smarter fighters don't fight once too often, and Louis was aware of his own decline.

Louis has turned promoter at a time when he is removing himself as the game's greatest drawing card, and the profits would ordinarily be down for promoters. But there are compensations. Television receipts will refatten the heavyweight title gates, even with Louis out of the ring, and these could be prosperous times for him.

Joe held the title 11 years, 8 months and 7 days. He defended it more often than any other man to become the fighting-est champion in heavyweight history. There can be no quarrel with his decision to quit. He never ducked anybody. To any disputants of his ability, he can always say, "look at the record."

No Fight With Jacobs

Louis Has Title All Tied Up For Next 2 Years, He Reveals

By Jack Hand

Miami, Fla., March 2 (AP).—Promoter Joe Louis, who learned about contracts from Mike Jacobs, revealed today he had tied up the NBA version of the heavyweight championship for his International Boxing Club by exclusive two-year agreements with Ezzard Charles and Jersey Joe Walcott.

"Charles or Walcott, whichever wins in June, has agreed to fight only for u sfor two years," said Louis on his return from another successful exhibition at Nassau, "that was part of the deal by which they will fight for the title. The winner has to fight either Lee Savold or Gus Lesnevich in 90 days."

When Louis won his crown from Jim Braddock in 1937 he signed a 10-year exclusive with Uncle Mike. That contract was a most important factor in the rise to power of Jacobs' Twentieth Century Sporting Club.

Louis appears to be in the promotional game to stay with the substantial financial backing of his new partners, Arthur M. Wirtz and James D. Norris.

"I'll handle the big bouts," said the retired champ. "I will suggest the matches I think are the best. We'll still work with the local matchmakers in each city when we come in. We don't want to hurt anybody."

Quantico Wins Eastern Title

Quantico, Va., March 2.—Quantico Marines won the All-Navy East Coast basketball championship here tonight, defeating Bayonne, N. J., Naval Supply Depot, 66-52.

The victory was the second straight over the Sailors—Quantico won the first meeting Tuesday night, 99-59.

The Marines now have earned the right to defend their All-Navy crown at Pearl Harbor, in the All-Navy tournament starting March 20.

GW, Central, St. John's and Gonzaga Win In Metro Play

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Undefeated George Washington of Alexandria, Central, St. John's and Gonzaga scored victories in the first round of the Metropolitan Washington high school basketball tournament before 3,586 last night at College Park.

G. W. eliminated Wilson, 53-40, Central routed Hyattsville, 59-39, St. John's defeated Washington-Lee of Arlington, 32-26, and Gonzaga nosed out Montgomery Blair, 54-52.

In Friday night's semifinals at College Park, G. W. faces Gonzaga, and Central meets St. John's. Finals are Monday night at College Park.

GW's 21st In Row

Using only five men, George Washington breezed to its 21st straight victory.

Tony Daukas and Billy Smith accounted for 21 points as GW took a 28-18 half-time lead. Jim Gahagan took up the burden in the second half, scoring 9. Daukas, Smith and Gahagan wound up with 17, 16 and 14 points. Jim Young, working in the pivot slot and Leo Speros, shooting at long range, scored 12 and 11 for the losers.

Hyattsville Fades

Central's Interhigh champions used every man on their squad as they buried Hyattsville in the last game on the bill.

Lou Glickfield, who moved here recently from Long Island, took some of Central's scoring burden off Jimmy Pantos by notching 12 points. But Pantos and Warren Lytle of Hyattsville shared scoring honors with 13 each.

Central trailed, 12-11 at the end of the first quarter, but soared into a 31-16 half time lead and coasted home.

Gonzaga spotted Blair a 9-point lead in the third quarter and then came on with a rush to nip the Blazers.

Tied, 14-14, at Half

Uncorking a swift passing attack in the face of St. John's tight zone defense, underdog W-L held the Cadets to a 14-14 tie at the half.

Don Kokes' 7 points in the first five minutes paced St. John's to an 8-6 first quarter lead. But Hooks Zimmerman's two field goals in the second period helped W-L to tie it up.

Kokes had 13 points, high for the game, and Zimmerman led W-L with 11.

Caps Beaten By Bombers' Rally, 82-75

The unpredictable St. Louis Bombers spoiled the home coming of the Eastern Division champion Washington Capitols last night when they outsteadied them in the stretch to win, 82-75, before 1125 persons at Uline Arena.

The Caps came from behind repeatedly to stay in the ball game and were leading with four minutes to go when Sonny Hertzberg's long range field goal gained them a 69-68 edge, but Red Rocha's two-pointer immediately afterward sent the visitors ahead to stay.

The Bombers were leading at the end of the first quarter, 27-19; at half-time, 41-39, and at the three-quarter mark, 61-56. But Washington rallied to remain in the running until hot hands by Rocha, Easy Parham and Don Putman broke their backs in the stretch.

Fred Scolari set the pace for Washington with 14 points while Jack Nichols contirbuted 13 and John Norlander 10.

Coach Red Auerbach made free use of his players throughout, substituting freely

Must Fight For Job

Nats Reluctant to Give Up As Coan Makes His Last Stand

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 2.—This is the year of decision for Gil Coan on the Washington ball club after dismal attempts to catch on as a big leaguer in 1947-48. But as yet the Nats' bosses are hesitant to mark him as a flop.

They're giving the fleet young man one more fling at a regular outfield job despite his .232 batting average of last season and his two-year bafflement against big-league pitching.

The reluctance to give up on Coan is understandable, Manager Joe Kuhel said today. "Everybody who saw him in the Southern Association vowed he was a great hitter. He's had streaks with us in which he looked like one. Even when he isn't hitting, he looks like he should."

In the year when Coan does hit, if he does, Kuhel envisions him as a powerful asset to the Nats. "He's a pretty good outfielder now, and there is nobody in the league who can run with him," said Kuhel. "If he hits .280 he can have the job."

Coan has a special kind of status in spring training. He was specifically invited to report with the pitchers and catchers in the hope the earlier start would help him. The hot-shot rookie outfielders from the International League, Clyde Vollmer and John Simmons, weren't invited for early conditioning.

In his first two trials in the Washington camp, Coan was troubled by a ringworm affliction of his feet. He has no complaints on that score this year.

Buddy Lewis is tabbed for the right field job with Ed Stewart viewed as a fixture in center. Coan will be battling Vollmer, Simmons and Sherry Robertson for the left field post.

As if contrite, the Orlando weather man served up a beaut for this afternoon's second day of practice, in contrast to the chill winds of yesterday. But the squad's hitting tapered off, what with Kuhel running out of batting practice pitchers and permitting none of his regulars to take the mound.

The first casualty of the spring training campaign was recorded when Pitcher Ed Klieman tripped over a clod in the outfield and lamed his knee slightly. It was enough to keep him out of the club's golf tournament later in the day, but he will be in uniform tomorrow.

Still the lone missing member of the squad is Ramon Garcia, the Cuban pitcher who is supposedly en route from Havana . . . Oddest-looking of the rookies pitchers is Mason Leeper, the wild left-hander from Atlanta, who could hire out as a bayou pirate . . . The biggest is Dick Weik, late of Chattanooga, who towers 6-4 . . . Milo Candini missed yesterday's opening practice but was present today after arriving from California by, it is suspected, ox-cart . . . Joe Haynes reports that doctors told him his particular operation for the removal of calcium deposits from his pitching shoulder was "the easiest kind of job of that type."

Fulks Case Falling Apart

Philadelphia, March 2 (AP).—The Commonwealth has failed to prove an attempt was made to bribe professional basketball star Joe Fulks, Judge Harry S. McDevitt ruled today.

After listening to Fulks testify that Morris (Moxie) Fleishman hinted at throwing Basketball Association of America games, McDevitt told Assistant District Attorney Americo V. Cortese that the law requires proof of "an overt act" and that this is lacking.

The player for the Philadelphia Warriors told the judge that Fleishman approached him on November 23, 1948, and said:

"You are going to get old some day. Other guys are making money throwing games. Why don't you?"

"Did he say anything about an offer of money?" McDevitt asked.

"No," said Fulks. "He just suggested that I could make money."

McDevitt then voiced the opinion that the Commonwealth had failed to prove an alleged bribe by Fleishman. He gave the assistant district attorney until Friday to submit a brief containing further support for the State's case against the 33-year-old defendant.

He sent Fleishman back to Moyamensing prison to await a final ruling.

The brief testimony was presented to McDevitt after Fleshman waived a jury trial.

Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Nationals, yesterday announced in Orlando, Fla., the acquisition of Paul Calvert, 30-year-old former Cleveland right-handed pitcher, as the squad went through its second drill today.

Calvert was one of those minor leaguers who jumped to the Mexican League in 1946 but this transgression has been forgiven by Commissioner A. B. Chandler and the former Indian hurler will be given a trial as a free agent.

Flies to Baltimore

Joe Says Real Sore'; Doctor Says 'It's Not Serious—Try Again'

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

The pennant hopes of the New York Yankees last night appeared to be hanging by a heel—the sensitive, ailing right heel of Joe DiMaggio, the guy who makes the Yankees tick.

DiMaggio passed through here yesterday on a flying visit to Dr. George Bennett in Baltimore when his bad heel acted up after only one workout at the Tampa, Fla., base.

Dr. Bennett, after an X-ray examination that lasted less than an hour, said DiMaggio didn't require any medical attention and could rejoin the Yankees at their Florida camp.

Despite Dr. Bennett's reassurance, it was obvious that DiMaggio didn't rush all the way to Baltimore from Florida, just for the ride.

When he reached National Airport here yesterday afternoon before his examination, DiMaggio said the heel became "inflamed, slightly swollen and awfully sore" after the Yanks' first practice session.

After reporting this to George Weiss yesterday morning, the alarmed Yankee general manager arranged for DiMaggio to be examined by the Johns Hopkins Hospital surgeon who has operated on him three times in the last two years.

Dr. Bennett seemed to feel DiMaggio's trouble was slight, but when he was aked if the slugging outfielder could resume spring training, he said, "He's going to try."

Dr. Bennett added: "It's a recurrence of his old trouble—nothing serious. In fact, I'm optimistic." Dr. Bennett advised whirlpool treatments and a special padding for DiMaggio's heel.

But if such treatments do not ease the pain in DiMaggio's heel when he resumes training, what then for Joe and the Yankees?

After the examination, DiMaggio took a train for New York where he planned to en plane for Tampa, Fla.

He was met here at National Airport by reporters when he arrived at 3:20 p. m., traveling under the name of "Patterson."

Looking tanned and fit, DiMaggio appeared almost unconcerned about his heel trouble but he made no secret of it causing him acute pain.

DiMaggio, who became the highest-priced ballplayer in Yankee history when he signed for a reputed $90,000 this season, related that he gave his heel a thorough test in Tuesday's first workout. Dr. Bennett had removed a bone spur last November 15.

"Maybe I went at it too strenuously," DiMag related, "anyway, it caused me considerable pain Tuesday night. The heel was inflamed and became slightly swollen.

"I reported to General Manager George Weiss right away and he decided to have me come right up to see Dr. Bennett. I'm anxious to get started and if anything's wrong, I want to know it right away."

DiMaggio said he refused to let his condition worry him. "There's no use worrying until I know what the trouble is," he explained. "anyway, I'll get through somehow, I guess. I always have."

Someone asked rather pointedly if the heel was affected any by his dancing. The reference was to a recently published picture which showed DiMaggio with a scantily clad professional dancing girl in Mexico.

Joe smiled. "I don't dance." He explained that the picture was taken while he was vacationing in Acapulco, Mexico.

"This girl and her husband are a team and she does a solo number. You know how those things go. She just swings around the floor and calls on the bald-headed bank

Finals Tonight

Lacy Scores 31 as Loyola Defeats A. U.

Loyola of Baltimore and Hampden-Sydney, top seeded, last night entered the finals of the Mason-Dixon Conference by winning high-scoring semifinal games at the Catholic University gym.

The finals will be played tonight at CU at 9 p. m. A preliminary is scheduled at 7:30.

Loyola moved into the championship game by eliminating American University's Eagles, 77-71, while Hampden-Sydney won from Bridgewater, 71-62.

In the Loyola-American game, it was the same old story—too much Jim Lacy of Loyola. He tied a tournament record with 31 points and broke his own record for most points in one half by scoring 24 in the second half.

With American U. ahead 42-41 and six minutes to play in the third quarter, Lacy took command of the game as he rang up 10 straight points. Lacy had a terrific .550 average for his shots from the floor and a .900 average for foul shots.

The game also broke the record for most fouls committed when 32 were called against American.

Ronnie Garshag of American seemed on the way to an individual scoring record as he got 22 points before being ejected from the game with five personal fouls with four minutes to go in the third period.

Hampden-Sydney Wins From Bridgewater

Hampden-Sydney, top-seeded team in the Mason-Dixon Conference Tournament, came through as expected last night at Catholic University's gym, defeating Bridgewater, 71-62.

Led by their center, Sticks McLean, who got 20 points for high scoring honors, Hampden-Sydney chalked up its second straight tournament win.

Bridgewater, playing a close defensive game, stayed in the running until only eight minutes remained but then goals by Bill Balas and McLean, and then two foul shots by Sharp sewed up the game for the Tigers.

Jim Myers played a brilliant game for Bridgewater. He was especially effective at the foul line, converting 11 of 15 tries.

GW Has High Hopes

N. C. State Tourney Favorite

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Durham, N. C., March 2.—The three-day skirmish to determine the Southern Conference's annual basketball championship opens here tomorrow.

North Carolina State latched on to the title two years ago, defended it successfully last year and is a unanimous choice to still be the king when the shootng ends Saturday night.

Coach Everett Case's Aces, featuring a collection of transplanted Indianians, swept through 15 pretourney league scuffles with but one loss, to Wake Forest. The Hoosier Hot Shots, howeevr, more than amply avenged their defeat, drubbing the Deacons by some 35 points in a return game the next week.

Other than Wake Forest, Coach George Garber's Colonials were the only team to furnish the powerful Wolfpack with any real opposition. The GW's had NC State on the ropes, but couldn't apply the crusher and dropped a thrilling 60-59 struggle in Washington in January.

George Washington, the tourney's fourth seeded team, won't get a crack at NC State this time unless it reaches the final of the dribble derby, something the Washingtonians could achieve with a little luck.

GW opens the eight-team scramble tomorrow afternoon at 2:15 o'clock against South Carolina, a team it thrashed by 30 points in their only 1948-49 meeting. After that, the Colonials tackle the winner of the William and Mary-Davidson tilt, one of the two contests on the docket for tomorrow evening. The winner of that one finds itself in the main event Saturday, against NC State unless a miracle of mountainous proportions happens.

Maryland's in-and-out Terrapins are here also, but their active participation in the tournament seems to be only a matter of time. Coach Flucie Stewart's young shooters are bracketed against third-seeded North Carolina and are expected to be sidelined tomorrow afternoon.

The Terps, who had a rough time gaining admittance to the tournament, have already been beaten by the Tar Heels twice this year and if they should happen to brush by Roy Carson & Co., you can mark it down as a genuine upset. The College Parkers follow G.W. into the arena.

North Caroilne States fires against Wake Forest in tomorrow night's 7:30 quarterfinal outing with William and Mary and Davidson clashing in the night's finale.

Lavelli Gets 32, Ties Mikan's Mark With 1870 Points

Storrs, Conn., March 2 (AP).—Yale's great hook-shot artist, Tony Lavelli, tied the all-time major college basketball scoring record of 1870 points tonight as he led the Eli team to an easy 71-55 victory over the University of Connecticut.

A crowd of 3800, biggest in Uconn basketball history, saw the Yale forward pour in 32 points to equal the record set in 1947 by George Mikan, former DePaul star now playing as a professional with the Minneapolis Lakers of the Basketball Association of America. Lavelli joined Mikan in fifth place among the all-time collegiate scorers.

Pimlico, Laurel Merger Bill Faces Fight on Senate Floor

Marlboro, Bowie Boss Opposes It

Annapolis, Md., March 2 (AP).—The administration-backed bill to transfer historic Pimlico's racing season to Laurel was introduced today by Senate President Byrnes (D., Balto., 5th).

The measure, which claimed advance support from Governor Lane, would implement a decision of the State Racing Commission.

But a fight has been promised by John W. Ferrell, president of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association, which operates Bowie and Marlboro.

He declared last night the shift would be unfair to Baltimore taxpayers and give southern Maryland too much racing.

It also would concentrate power "in the hands of one organization, the Maryland Jockey Club," Farrell said.

Delegate Tawney (D., Balto. 3d) followed up with a similar protest today. He suggested Pimlico's 25 days be split evenly with Bowie and Havre de Grace.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, president of Havre de Grace, has approved the proposed transfer.

Building a new track would cost too much "to be feasible as a matter of economics" the racing commission said last week in approving the Jockey Club request to abandon 79-year-old Pimlico.

The Jockey Club owns "Old Hilltop" in northwest Baltimore, and has controlling interest in Laurel, half way between Baltimore and Washington.

To run both meetings at Laurel would help "meet the competition now offered by new tracks constructed in recent years in neighboring States," the commission said.

Legislation is necessary to implement the commission ruling so that one licensee may hold its meeting at another's track. The 1947 General Assembly authorized the Jockey Club to rebuild Pimlico elsewhere, but not to transfer.

The Jockey Club also needs legal authority to combine the "racing fund" of the two meetings for plant improvements at Laurel. Tracks deduct one-half of 1 per cent of their betting pool to build up the fund.

Unbeaten C. U. Favored Over Terp Boxers Tonight

And Won by Nose
Lobert Was So Fast He Raced Horses

By Red Smith

SANFORD, Fla. (NYHT) March 2.—John Lobert pointed out a fence bounding the outfield of one of eight ball parks on Hubbell's Thirty Acres where the Giant farm hands take spring training. Beyond the fence, he said, was a race track where quarter horses ran every Sunday.

Red Smith

"We had to build the fence," he said, "to keep 'em off the ball fields. The Dusty Boots Riding Association, they call themselves, and they used to come over here and race horses around the bases and cut up our infields."

That recalled the time when John raced a quarter horse around the bases. He was third baseman for the Phillies at the time, the swiftest runner in baseball, holder of a speed record for circling the bases which stood for practically an eternity. Today he is a scout, trouble-shooter and assistant farm administrator for the Giants, a delicious guy with the gayest laugh and biggest nose in North America.

In 1913 when John McGraw took a couple of ball clubs around the world they played an exhibition in Oxnard, Calif. The town's leading citizens softened Lobert up with a breakfast of barbecued ox, lima beans and beer, then got him to agree to race a quarter horse around the bases that afternoon.

"He was a big, beautiful, black thing," John said. "Looked just like Zev."

WELL LOBERT broke in front and held his lead around third base, running with a speed born of terror because he could hear the pounding hooves behind him and felt sure that if he lost ground he would be trampled to death. It was a photo finish at the plate.

"Who win?" John gasped.

"The horse," said Bill Klem, the old arbitrator, "beat you a dirty nose."

"You," said John, "are a filthy liar. There ain't a horse ever foaled could beat mé a nose."

And he showed Klem his profile.

John was asked yesterday, "didn't you have another race against a horse? A thoroughbred?"

His nose twinkled. "two thoroughbreds," he said, "in Havana. I ran against two horses, two motorcycles, two automobiles and one other runner. I win by a slide."

"I was only supposed to run a quarter of a mile and for two weeks I trained secretly by moonlight with a lantern hung on my ear. We kept it secret because we were trying to get some bets down. But because I win an elimination race breezing, Curly Brown, the guy Horace Stoneham bought the track from, added 95 yards to my distance. I could run a quarter in :52 or less, but I wasn't trained to go a distance of ground.

"I'M 12 TO 5 and they back me down to 6 to 5. There's a $400 purse to the winner; the pistol goes off and I'm away flying.

"I got two corks in my hands and my spikes are sharpened and I'm pumping for all I'm worth but I'm asking myself, 'Can I do it? Can I go any farther?' I'm dead.

"Now I'm maybe 5 feet from the finish line and I can't take another step. I'm in front but I can hear a motorcycle behind me. 'pukka-pukka-pukka-pukka-bbbrrrttt' so I dive for the line and I fall across. I hear something go by me, 'rrrrrttt' but I can't see it. It was one of those motorcycles, must've been doing 100 miles an hour.

"I'm No. 4. I had just enough strength to roll over and look at the results board in the infield. They're posting the result. A horse named No. 4 win it."

Clinton Boys Club Wins

Paced by Charles Stinger and Frank Scandone, each with 12 points, the Clinton Boys' Club romped 65-31 over the Clinton Boy Scouts last night at Surrattsville High School. It was the Boys Club's eighth win in nine starts.

Ennis Seeks To Get Even With Reider

Catholic University's undefeated boxing squad will be a slight favorite when they encounter Maryland tonight at Richie Coliseum. Catholic is unbeaten this year in four bouts and one of their victories was a 5½-2½ win over The Citadel, a team which beat Maryland, 5-3. Against the only other common foe, Georgetown, Catholic U. won, 5-3, while the Terps were victorious, 7½-2½. Maryland has won 2 and lost 3 this year.

Several fights shape up as real crowd pleasers. Foremost is the slugging match between the Terps' Ed Reider and Bucky Ennis of Catholic U. Ennis has won his last three fights by the TKO route and hopes to add Reider, who TKO'd him in the second round last year, to his string. Reider, Southern Conference 155-pound king, is undefeated this year.

The first two fights also promise thrills. Tom Cronin, Cardinal 125-pounder who has gone unbeaten in his last eight bouts, will meet Maryland's freshman sensation, Al Glass, who has lost only one of four college bouts. Jack Redmond, another Cardinal boxer with a string of eight bouts without a loss, but held to a draw in his meeting with Don Bitzner of Army last Saturday night, will meet Spencer Hopkins.

In one of the few rematches from last year, Billy Mahar of CU fights Bob Gregson of Maryland. These two fought to a draw last year. Mahar has a habit of drawing all tough assignments this year. His first fight of the year he lost a very close decision to Jim Rollier, the Eastern Intercollegiate champ from Syracuse. Two fights later, against The Citadel, he fought Dale Matthews, Southern Conference champion and won a clear-cut decision. This was the first time Matthews had been beaten in three years of collegiate competition and ended a string of 21 straight victories.

Byrd Defends Redland Title

Beverly Byrd, war hero and son of Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, will attempt to make it two straight victories in the Redland Bowl feature of Saturday's point-to-point race program. Byrd, who turned in a sensational effort in 1948 aboard Sun Wonder, is slated to be in the saddle of Hunton Atwell's War Veteran, an aptly-named hunter.

Also in the field that may reach 15 with the signing of post entries, will be Miss Judy Johnson, nationally famous horsewoman and trainer, who finished second to Byrd in last year's renewal. Miss Johnson will ride Carverdale Lee, owned by Tony Auth of Redland.

Other horses in line for the gruelling test of four to five miles over open farming country with their riders are: Howard Schaeffer's Billy Boy, owner; Marrian Curran's Lump Sum, Marrian Curran, jr.; T. T. Mott's Chen, F. McCabe; William Gary's Jerry, Frank Lewis; Dr. Joseph Rodgers' Lord Loudoun, owner; Justine Funkhouser's Heriade, Frank Gall; Thacy Bedsworth's Gold Midas, Eddie Caldwell.

The Redland races, first of the year's outdoor events for the horsey folk hereabouts, will be staged, starting from Martin's Dairy Farm located on Georgia ave. extended near Olney, Md. As usual the exact course will not be made known until 48 hours before the 2'clock postime for the first of the four races scheduled.

In addition to the Redland Bowl, the Terpenning Cup (a pair race), Heavyweight and Gap Hunters events will round out the program.

Chandler Will Hear Browns, Cards' Dispute

Sarasota, Fla., March 2 (AP).—Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler said today he would conduct a hearing on the dispute between the St. Louis Cardinals and Browns over Sportsman's Park.

He did not say when the hearing would be held.

The Browns notified the Cardinals Monday they could not use Sportsman's Park after April 1. The two clubs have been feuding for some time over use of the park.

The Browns have asked more rental money for use of the park.

Chandler explained "both clubs made representations to come for a hearing."

Asked if he thought the dispute came within his jurisdiction, Chandler replied:

"I wouldn't handle it if I didn't think so.

"I've known this has been brewing for several months" and "have given considerable thought and deliberation" to it.

Yanks, Tribe Squabble

Sarasota, Fla., March 2 (AP).—Both the New York Yankees and Cleveland Indians will protest separately to Baseball Commissioner Chandler here Friday over the other's signing of Negro players.

Mrs. Glick Upsets Riley

Ormond Beach, Fla., March 2 (AP).—Necomers produced the fireworks today in opening-round match play of the South Atlantic women's golf tournament.

Mrs. Maurice Glick of Baltimore, Md., one of the most improved golfers in the field, upset Polly Riley of Fort Worth, Tex., one of the top-ranking women golfers, 2 and 1.

Betty McKinnon of Mount Pleasant, Tex., making her first visit to Florida, set a record of 69 for women in defeating Mrs. Betty Bush of Hammond, Ind., 4 and 3.

This score was two under the regular par for the Ormond course and three strokes lower than the previous mark of 72 made in previous competitions here by Virginia Van Wie, Patty Berg, Margaret Gunther and Mrs. Babe Didrikson Zaharias.

Wilbur Nead Wins

Wilbur Nead won the wrestle-royal at Turner's last night when he outlasted seven burly opponents, then pinned Joe Kamaroff in the regular windup in 27 minutes.

Joe DiMaggio's Sore After First Drill, Flies to Baltimore for Checkup

president or somebody to dance a few steps for fun," Joe added.

"Naturally, somebody says, 'Dance with Joe.' That's all there was to that."

Asked if the picture evoked any criticism, DiMaggio said he understood the ball club received one unfavorable letter and a phone call or two.

DiMaggio appears to be in excellent shape. He boasted that he caught a 10-foot-2, 128-pound sailfish at Acapulco and expects to win top prize in the contest at that resort.

The Associated Press pointed out that DiMaggio has spent almost as much time in hospitals as on the ball fields since he came to the major leagues. He's had some "misery" every year since he joined the Yankees in 1936.

His medical record is as impressive as his hitting—knee trouble, eye trouble, stomach trouble, tonsilitis, arm trouble and heel trouble.

In the past two years he's had three operations at Johns Hopkins.

He had a bone spur removed from his left heel after the 1946 season and when the incision left an open sore which refused to mend Dr. Bennett ordered a skin-grafting operation.

He was back at the end of the 1947 season to have bone chips removed from his throwing arm. Then he returned last November for the operation on his right heel.

The assortment of ailments has kept him out of opening games with the Yankees seven different years.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Too Many Holidays Fatigue U. S. Workers, Congressman Gripes

Representative Usher L. Burdick (R., N. Dak.) writes letters to his constituents. The Civil Service Committee member sent out one this week in which he said that "Government employes and letters from constituents manage to combine to make every day a harrowing experience for members of Congress."

It's evident from his letter that Burdick believes Federal workers have soft jobs; that they don't do enough work. This is the way he sizes up the employe situation:

"The employes get a base pay that is pretty good, but on top of that, stenographers get $1428 more for a total of $3928. Of course, living in Washington is high . . . But it's still good pay . . . Employes don't have to come to work before 9 a. m., Monday through Friday. They get an hour off at noon and quit at 5. On Saturdays they don't work at all, and of course they are not here Sunday, and usually they have been out of town Saturday and Sunday and arrive at the office late Monday morning.

"By Wednesday they are rested up and do some good work, but Friday they are not much account, as they are figuring what to do with the next Saturday and Sunday. The Inauguration gave them two extra days off this year; Lincoln's Birthday was another day off (It wasn't.—Editor's note) and so was Washington's Birthday. You could say that every day after a vacation is about half a day, as it takes some time for the employes to recuperate after one of these vacations.

"In Government work the boss can't fire the help because they are usually political appointments and he doesn't want to start a row; besides, the Civil Service would get in his hair. One would conclude that, with the heavy mail and thousands of questions fired at Congressmen, their help couldn't get the work out.

"Well, they don't, except in cases where the Congressman is a typist himself. Many Congressmen sit at a typewriter when they are not on the floor. Most of them are so busy taking the place of worn-out employes, worn out by vacations, that they can't think straight, or at all. Many lawmakers go round in a stupor which does not create a good impression with people who visit here. I think that is what was the matter with members of the Eightieth Congress—they were in a stupor most of the time, and it wasn't their fault either."

It appears to me that Burdick's gripe is against his own office force. Anyway, his is one Congressman's opinion of Federal workers. And he sits on the committee which passes on employe legislation.

NEW AGENCY? Representative Wilbur Mills (D., Ark.) has in a bill to create a 25-man Tax-Settlement Board. Members would be paid $12,500 salaries. The proposed agency would settle disputes between the taxpayer and the Internal Revenue Bureau. The taxpayer would have 60 days to petition the board to settle his case after he's billed for additional taxes by Revenue. Mills is a ranking member of the House Ways and Means Committee which will consider the bill.

PAY BILL: The O'Conor Subcommittee of the Senate Civil Service Committee debated the Lucas-Miller pay bill for two hours yesterday. Again there was no official action—a habit which is becoming most discouraging to the District and Foreign Service workers and Federal executives who are covered by the bill.

The subcommittee will confer at the White House with President Truman at 10 a. m. today on the top Federal executive pay bill. The conference, called by the President, will be attended by Senators Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.), full committee chairman; Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.), subcommittee chairman; J. Melville Broughton (D., N. C.), Russell B. Long (D., La.), Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.) and Raymond E. Baldwin (R., Conn.).

The bill, covering over 200 top-level Federal officials and a $330 salary boost for District classified workers, is pending before the pay subcommittees on both sides of the Capitol.

RETIREMENT: Chairman Johnston of the Senate Civil Service Committee has in a bill to merge the Canal Zone retirement systm with the Civil Service system . . . Representative Potter (R., Mich.) put in a bill to raise the salaries of lighthouse keepers and crew members by 33 per cent . . .

Former Slave, 110 Years Old Or More, Marks Birth Today

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

ALEXANDER WILLIS

Was born a slave 110 years ago

Alexander Willis will celebrate his 110th birthday today, but he's not sure about it—he may be a few years older.

Willis was born a slave on the Orange, Va., plantation of Edward Kennedy, and it was Kennedy who decided how old Willis was. And Kennedy told Willis he was born in 1839.

But according to Willis' son, Armstead Willis, who lives with his dad at 1816 11th st. nw., masters frequently made their slaves younger so they could bring fancier prices. Young Willis, age 54, says that's what happened to his father.

The small, gray-haired centenarian who could pass easily for 70, doesn't care to argue. He thinks he was pretty lucky to make it this far and the only reason for it that he can think of is that he's "stuck pretty close to my Master—the Lord, since my religious conversion in 1880."

That's why he strolls down to the Vermont Avenue Baptist Church most every Sunday. "Man, that's my home," he says. On weekdays, after he feeds and clothes himself, he takes long walks around the neighborhood.

A lifetime of work on Virginia farms, both as a slave and freeman, ended for him at the age of 100, when he stopped hauling ice and coal around for his son Armstead.

He's had three wives and 25 children. His oldest child, Maria Willis, 79, of 2120 H st. nw., was 20 years older than her second stepmother whom Willis married in 1931 and who died in 1939.

Willis has been living here with his son since 1928. Out of sorts physically since last summer when he underwent an operation, he's serene and confident about the future. "The Almighty's working for me," he says.

Court Finds Perjury in Divorce Suit

Marville Decree Voided by Judge; Husband Arrested By District Police

A divorce decree won by a District man last September in Prince Georges County was voided yesterday by Circuit Court Judge Charles C. Marbury on grounds that it had been obtained by perjury.

The man, Arthur J. Mayville, 33, of 39 T st. ne., has been arrested by District police on a warrant taken out by State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie of Prince Georges County. The warrant charges Mayville with perjury.

Bigamy Charge

Mayville, listed by police as a cashier, will also be charged with bigamy, according to Bowie. County records show that Mayville married Miss Eva Mildred Johnson, 22, of 83 New York ave. nw., in Hyattsville, on September 17, 1948—nine days after his divorce was granted by Judge Marbury.

The cashier's arrest stems from charges by his former wife, Mrs. Myrtle H. Mayville, that the divorce was obtained by perjury. She did not contest the suit, and neither "admitted or denied" at the trial Mayville's allegations in it.

Mrs. Mayville accuses Mayville of falsely testifying in his bill of complaint that he had lived in Prince Georges County for two years prior to the divorce, at 3710 35th st., Mount Rainier, and had been separated from his wife since July, 1944.

Her position was outlined in a letter to Judge Marbury, he revealed. On receipt of it, he ordered a hearing to "show cause" why the decree should not be set aside which was held February 18 at Upper Marlboro. Mayville did not appear.

Wife's Statement

At the hearing, Mrs. Mayville testified the couple never lived in Prince Georges County—as sworn to in her husband's bill of complaint—and that they were not separated until August 8, 1948.

Her statements were corroborated by the Rev. Harry C. Marsh, of 1348 Lawrence st. ne., pastor of Brookland Methodist Church, and a George Edward Miller, reportedly a relative by marriage of Mrs. Mayville.

During the hearing, Judge Marbury said, Miller asserted that Mrs. Mayville had brought the charges because she still loved her husband. It was also brought out then, the judge said, that Mayville had paid his former wife only $4 of the $50 monthly granted her for maintenance of their child, whose custody she won.

The divorce decree was vacated by Judge Marbury February 23, but filing was withheld until yesterday pending apprehension of Mayville.

After arrest, Mayville refused to return to Prince Georges County, and demanded an extradition hearing, which was set for April 1 in Municipal Court. He is being held on a fugitive from justice charge by District police.

High Court Printer Left $162,000 Estate

Clarence E. Bright, Supreme Court printer, who died February 19 at the age of 73, left an estate of $162,000, it was disclosed yesterday.

District Court probate papers were filed showing his estate will be placed in trust to benefit the widow, Mrs. Sophia S. Bright, 7125 16th st. nw. Provision also is made in the will for his daughter, Mrs. Evelyn Bright Buckley, and for ultimate distribution of the estate to garndchildren.

Mrs. Keleher Asked to Call On Grand Jury

State's Attorney Also Invites Laughlin, Her Counsel, to Appear

Mrs. Anna T. Keleher and her attorney, James J. Laughlin, yesterday were asked to prove to a Prince Georges County grand jury that her husband, once-convicted gambler John B. Keleher, conducted "extensive gambling operations" in Mount Rainier, Md.

The invitation was contained in a letter to Laughlin from State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie. In it Bowie requested them to appear before the grand jury on April 6, 7 or 8.

Last January, while a divorce from Keleher, Mrs. Keleher testified in District Court that her husband carried on horse-race betting which netted him $30,000 a month income under the protection of Prince Georges County and Mount Rainier police.

These accusations were branded by Bowie, in the letter, as "purely hearsay and wholly uncorroborated and contradicted by other witnesses."

(Attorney Laughlin, on the day preceding Mrs. Keleher's charges, telegraphed Governor Lane suggesting he designate a representative to sit in on the proceedings. Bowie's letter notes that he received Laughlin's telegram from Governor Lane and sent a member of his staff to the trial.)

In writing that Mrs. Keleher's testimony had not been substantiated, however, Bowie called her statements "too serious to be passed over." He pointed out that County and Mount Rainier police had raided the alleged gambling establishment and found "apparent long unoccupancy."

"I feel that all possible means of ascertaining the real truth should be fully exhausted before the matter is considered a closed incident," Bowie said

Laughlin last night told a Washington Post reporter he would accept Bowie's invitation and that he felt sure Mrs. Keleher would also. He said he had not received the communication.

Special Rites Mark First Day of Lent

Ash Wednesday, the first day of Lent, was observed yesterday at special services in Protestant and Roman Catholic churches in the Greater Washington area.

At Catholic and some Protestant churches, ashes were placed on the foreheads of worshipers with the words "Remember man that thou art dust, and unto dust thou shall return."

Pope Addresses Children

Pope Pius XII spoke to parochial school children throughout the world in an Ash Wednesday broadcast from the Vatican on behalf of the five-million-dollar drive for the Bishops' Fund for Victims of War. Goal for the Washington archdiocese is $75,000, according to the Rev. E. Jerome Winter, director.

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, will speak at Lenten services at 12 noon today and Friday at the Episcopal Church of the Epiphany, 1317 G st. nw.

At the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, 212 East Capitol st., Dr. J. Warren Hastings, pastor of National City Christian Church, will speak at 12:10 p. m. today and the Rev. Robert J. Plumb, rector of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, will speak at 12:10 Friday.

Federation Services Daily

Services sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches are held daily except Saturday at National Presbyterian Church, Connecticut ave. and N st. nw., at 12:05 p. m. Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church will speak today and Dr. Hastings on Friday.

The Lutheran Ministerial Association is sponsoring daily devotions at the Lutheran Church Center, 736 Jackson pl. nw., at 12:05 p. m. The Rev. Delmar L. Dyreson, associate director of the General Commission on Chaplains, will speak today and the Rev. Otto C. Schuetze, pastor of Christ Lutheran Church, Bethesda, will speak Friday.

Morgan Gets Backing for District Post

American Business Group Indorses Him To Succeed Young

Thomas P. Morgan, jr., who has been suggested as successor to John Russell Young as District Commissioner, received additional support last night.

Unanimous, unqualified indorsement was given Morgan, retired insurance executive and member of the District Boxing Commission, by the American Business Association of the District.

The board of directors of the Federation of Businessmen's Associations also added its indorsement of Morgan, but made it contingent on the failure of President Truman to reappoint Young, whose term expires in May.

The motion adopted by the directors of the Federation which gave the green light to Morgan if Mr. Truman does not reappoint Young was introduced by J. A. Kamerow and Hal J. Miller, president and secretary, respectively, of the American Business Association.

Meanwhile, at the American Business Association meeting, Miller was named along with Al Wheeler and Jack Blank to draft an indorsement of Morgan for submission to President Truman.

The latter group indorsed Morgan as "a successful businessman, who has indicated by his willingness to help the underprivileged that he is interested in them as well," and said that for over three decades he has been a civic leader in Washington.

The resolution was proposed by Arthur Clarendon Smith, chairman of the Truman-Barkeley Club

Crestwood Citizens

The Crestwood Citizens Association last night approved unanimously a 2-per-cent sales tax and voted to request the Department of Vehicles of Traffic to reverse the stop signs at Arkansas ave. and Upshur st. nw. to make the latter street the through artery.

Dr. Francis Reichelderfer, chief of the Weather Bureau, spoke at the meeting held in Roosevelt High School.

Fairfax Village

Impetus to the Fairfax Village Citizens Association's membership drive was provided last night by three leaders of the Federation of Citizens Associations at the member unit's meeting at the Anne Beers School, 36th pl. and Alabama ave. se.

John H. Connaughton, Federation president, and Harry A. Liebrand, president of the Southeast Council, outlined procedures for conducting the drive and incentives for adding membership.

The speakers were introduced by George L. Gregg, Randle Highlands Citizens Association president and delegate to the Federation.

Truman Asks Congress for $1½ Million Sesqui Funds

Sums for Gallinger And St. Elizabeths Hospitals Included In Money Requests

President Truman yesterday asked Congress to set aside $1,500,000 to help finance Washington's celebration of its 150th anniversary next year.

The sum was included in a consolidated supplemental budget estimate for the current fiscal year, which was transmitted to Congress yesterday. Of a total of more than 800 million dollars asked by President Truman, the District of Columbia would receive slightly more than three million dollars.

A request for $75,000 to help finance construction of the Fourteenth Precinct station house at Benning rd. and 42d st. ne. was included in the budget. Already appropriated is $174,000. The money would be used to meet additional construction and material costs.

Gallinger Hospital would receive an addjtional $336,850 if Congress approves the President's supplemental budget. Of this sum, $65,000 would be used to construct a new crematorium, to replace the one now due to be destroyed. The remainder of the appropriation would go to finance increased costs of operation of the hospital during the current fiscal year.

Also included in the budget is $816,000 for St. Elizabeths Hospital. This money would be used to meet the increased contract per diem cost for indigent patients, it was explained.

Rights Alleged Lost in Illegal Detention Case

Is a man who is jailed overnight—without first having a chance to make bond or to see a judge—deprived of his constitutional rights?

That question was posed to Arlington Trial Justice Hugh Reid yesterday in a test case hearing in County Court.

At issue was the arrest February 9 of William A. Ring, 33, of 958 26th st. nw., charged with driving while drunk.

Ring's attorney, Homer Randolph Thomas, contended Ring was arrested at 3:45 p. m., jailed at 4:07 p. m., and only released after a preliminary County Court hearing the following morning, when bond was set at $500.

Thomas said his client never had a chance to post bond before he was jailed, or to appear before judicial officer who might pass on his condition.

Thomas quoted Section 4827 of the Virginia Code which says that the arresting officer shall first bring the person charged before a judicial officer before jailing the suspect.

Judge Reid said he would "consider the case" for several days before ruling on Attorney Thomas' request to dismiss charges.

He called the Ring case "most important," in that it "affects our entire court procedure."

Upper-Floor Fire Routs 100 From Club Hillbilly

The second floor of the Club Hillbilly, 6900 Central ave., Seat Pleasant, Md., was damaged last night by a fire that routed about 100 patrons from the lower floor.

Five Prince Georges County volunteer fire departments and one rescue squad responded to the two-alarm blaze, which was discovered at 10:04 p. m. It was extinguished by 11 o'clock.

No one was on the second floor, which is used for sleeping quarters by employes, when the fire broke out, firemen said. The building is a two-story frame structure.

The club is operated by Connie B. Gay, hillbilly entertainer.

Fourth This Year

Brooks Quits Board of Symphony

Harold A. Brooks revealed yesterday that he has resigned as a member of the board of directors of the National Symphony Orchestra Association. He became the fourth board member to do so in the past two months.

The retired Potomac Electric Power Co. vice president, who lives at 3 W. Irving st., Chevy Chase, refused to disclose his reason for resigning. Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, Walter Bruce Howe and Mrs. Stanley Woodward resigned as board members earlier this year.

It is believed the resignations stemmed from differences over the policy changes instituted by the board, including the acceptance of Hans Kindler's resignation as the orchestra's musical director.

Brooks has been active in the association for 12 years, as board member, vice president, chairman of the sustaining fund and head of the summer concert committee.

Federation Asks 1000-Ft. Road Link In Arlington

Arlington's Civic Federation has urged construction of a road to connect the extension of the George Washington Memorial Parkway with Lee hwy. near Lyon Village.

In its Tuesday night meeting, the federation suggested a 1000-foot thoroughfare to link the parkway, now under construction, to Lee hwy. at Kirkwood rd.

In another resolution, the federation called on its member groups to analyze the proposed county and school budgets and make their views known to the county board at a public hearing March 24.

Woman Ruled Insane, Saved From Chair

A 38-year-old waitress who was awaiting the death sentence for first-dregree murder was adjudged of unsound mind yesterday in District Court.

By the jury verdict of insanity, Clotiel Cox, 1311 V st. nw., avoided the electric chair. The formal order sending her to St. Elizabeths Hospital is expected to be signed today.

The waitress was convicted on January 18 for the fatal "triangle" shooting of Mrs. Hattie H. Lavender, 34, in the Dunbar Hotel.

Mrs. Lavender, a few days before the shooting last August had married Casey Lavender, a Navy petty officer, with whom Miss Cox said she was in love.

In the short lunacy hearing before Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut, Miss Cox sat cringing with her eyes shut most of the time. Psychiatrists said she was suffering from "undifferentiated psychosis."

Florists Warned Maryland U. Cut Will Hurt Them

Dr. Roger B. Corbett at College Park, Md., told Maryland florists and greenhouse operators yesterday that if the University of Maryland's budget is cut sharply it will hamper a proposed greenhouse-expansion program.

Dr. Corbett, associate dean of the College of Agriculture, was the main speaker at the luncheon meeting for 150 florists and commercial flower producers attending a one-day short course.

He said the budget included $201,800 for this program but that if the budget is cut from approximately 20 million dollars to three million dollars, as recommended by the State Planning Commission, that would probably leave about $30,000 for greenhouse expansion and other work.

Teacher Losing Divorce Suit On Adultery Charge Is Fired

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Mrs. Edith P. Thomas, 4912 Ames st. ne., yesterday was fired from her job as a public school teacher because she lost a divorce suit in which the charge was adultery.

The Board of Education by a 4-to-2 vote ordered her dismissal.

Earlier the board sustained a charge brought by school officials that said she "was found by the District Court to be guilty of adultery, which is an offense against morality and good order, contrary to the by-laws, rules and regulations of the public schools."

Voting against the dismissal were C. Melvin Sharpe and Albert E. Steinem, who declared the penalty of dismissal "too severe."

Steinem said he thought suspension sufficient punishment.

Mrs. Thomas, a teacher in the schools for 16 years, was suspended from her job at the Carver Elementary School more than a year ago after her husband was granted a divorce. She appealed her suspension to the school board, which then sat in trial.

Voting for the dismissal were Adelbert W. Lee, Dr. James A. Gannon, Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith and Mrs. Velma G. Williams.

By a unanimous vote, the board declared that another teacher, Mrs. Jessie H. Jackson, 319 Division ave. ne., was not entitled to her former teaching status after returning from maternity leave.

Mrs. Jackson, who formally taught mathematics at Armstrong High School, has been assigned to a junior high school.

The board approved the transfer of the white Park View Elementary School, Warder and Newton sts. nw., to use by Negro children, effective next September, and accepted for occupancy a temporary annex to the Crummell Elementary School, Kendall and Providence sts. ne.

Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning reported that a disciplinary problem at the Merritt School, Hayes and Lowrie sts. ne., in which on four occasions students and a teacher came to blows, has been corrected. A counsellor has been assigned and principal offenders transferred.

The board at the request of Dr. Corning ruled that he has authority to grant the use of school buildings for interracial meetings of school employes, provided they are of an educational nature.

In other actions, the board:

Continued the services of Dr. G. Harris White, a teacher of physical education at Wilson Teachers College, beyond his seventieth birthday on April 9. He will be retired at the end of the school year.

Retired Nathanial A. Murray, 150 U st. nw., biology teacher at Armstrong High School, after 27 years in the public school system.

2 D. C. Boys Among 40 Finalists in Science Contest

Two District youths are among the 40 national finalists who will participate in the five-day Science Talent Institute which opens here today.

They are Walter Gilbert, 16, of 3309 35th st. nw., a senior at Sidwell Friends School, and Carl W. Werntz, 17, of 620 Nicholson st. nw., a senior at Coolidge High School.

The 40 finalists will be received at 11:30 a. m. today at the White House by President Truman. At an awards banquet Monday night at the Hotel Statler, winners of $11,000 worth of Westinghouse science scholarships will be announced.

Montgomery Council Accused Of Reneging on Zoning Accord

The Montgomery County Council was accused yesterday of "reneging" on an agreement to finance a crackdown against widespread zoning violations in the county.

The accusation followed admissions by both the county council and the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission that negotiations over which agency should enforce zoning regulations had bogged down.

Making the accusation was J. Bond Smith, general counsel of the MNCPPC, whose remarks followed statements by President Frederick P. Lee of the county council. Lee said on Tuesday he "doubted" if the MNCPPC planned to abide by its agreement to accept the responsibility.

Both sides have indicated the principal disagreement between them is over which agency should pay for the new enforcement setup.

Smith said yesterday that agreement by the MNCPPC to accept the enforcement responsibility was conditioned on a promise by the county council to make additional funds available for this purpose.

He said "it was naive for Mr. Lee, after reneging on the council's proposal," to say that the needed funds should come from increased property assessments.

All MNCPPC funds, Smith said, are committed to administrative work of the planning body which increases "in direct proportion to the growth of the area."

He added that the commission "is willing to resume negotiations . . . in the spirit of full and frank cooperation."

Baltimore Builder Convicted Of Cheating on GI Homes

Baltimore, March 2 (AP).—A house builder was convicted of Federal violations today as a result of the howl raised by veterans who complained they had been cheated on new homes.

Today's conviction came in the first Federal prosecution and it was the first case to go to a jury. Several Federal indictments were returned after an investigation by the FBI. The G-men entered the case after a spokesman for Baltimore veterans took their complaints to the White House.

Theodore Julio, 43-year-old naturalized Italian, faces a maximum penalty of 33 years in prison and fines up to $60,000 as the result of the conviction.

Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut deferred sentence until Friday.

The builder was convicted on charges of deviating from the plans and specifications on three houses he built and sold to veterans.

He also was found guilty of making false reports to the office of temporary controls about the prices for which he sold three other houses in the development.

Julio's defense was that he had built good houses, had of necessity substituted some materials, and had charged higher prices because it was planned to turn some of the houses into two-family units.

Area News in Brief

Homosexuals Held Not All Psychopaths

Many homosexuals here cannot be considered sexual psychopaths within the meaning of the law, Dr. Joseph Gilbert, the city alienist, declared yesterday. Testifying in answer to theoretical questions on the District Court witness stand, Dr. Gilbert said that homosexuals were "deviates from the sexual norm."

He said that without other detrimental factors in the personality, a homesexual probably could not be committed to St. Elizabeths Hospital for treatment as a sexual psychopath.

The psychiatrist was testifying in the case of Joseph S. Watts, 64-year-old former acrobat, 1424 Q st. nw. Watts was committed after a hearing for treatment for his aberrations.

According to police, Watts has a criminal record including numerous sex offenses dating back to 1921.

He was arrested here last September after three small girls said he offered them 25 cents each in a vain effort to get them to indulge in an indecent act with him.

His record shows that in 1925 he was sentenced to 44 months in jail for assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge, and has been arrested on numerous other occasions. He is the father of four children.

Plea on Egress Law

The Washington Property Owners Association, a group of owners of small structures, yesterday requested the District Commissioners to suspend the egress laws until six months after printed copies of the law are made public.

District officials noted that copies of a mimeographed digest of the law have been available to building owners in the Department of Inspections for the past three months. Printed copies of the entire law are expected shortly.

Optometry Measure Filed

A bill to regulate the practice of optometry in the District was filed in the House yesterday by Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.).

The measure declares optometry "a profession affecting the public interest" and therefore subject to regulation. It states that only "qualified" optometrists would be permitted to practice here.

An identical bill passed the House in the last Congress but died in the Senate.

Held on Forgery Charge

Alvin E. Rodgers, jr., 23, a cabinetmaker, was held yesterday under $1000 bond for grand jury action on a check forgery charge. Rodgers was arrested on the tip of a bank teller.

Police in Municipal Court said a lookout had been published after expert forgeries involving $241 had been made on the account of Mrs. Ida W. Tyler, principal of Garrison Elementary School.

When Rodgers came into the Industrial Bank of Washington, 11th and U sts. nw., to cash a check bearing Mrs. Tyler's signature, the teller, Mrs Ruby Patterson, 25, notified the police.

Mrs. Elizabeth W. Todd

Mrs. Elizabeth Ashfield Walker Todd, 78, widow of Dr. William J. Todd, a practicing physician in Baltimore for nearly 50 years, died yesterday at the home of her sister, Mrs. R. S. Litsinger, 1506 Highland dr., Silver Spring, Md.

She was a native of Washington and moved to Silver Spring four years ago following the death of her husband. She was the daughter of the late Redford W. Walker, Washington real estate dealer, and Mrs. Phebe Ann Elliott Walker.

Besides her sister, she is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Redford W. Bruce of Canon City, Colo.

Funeral services have been tentatively set for Friday at 3 p. m. at the home of her sister. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mrs. Margaret Towle Luce

Mrs. Margaret Towle Luce, 60, widow of Henry F. Luce and a retired Veterans' Administration clerk, died yesterday at her home, 12 Parkside rd., Silver Spring, Md., after a year's illness.

Born in Glasgow, Scotland, she came to the United States at the age of 12 years and had lived in Washington for more than 30 years prior to moving to Silver Silver Spring 16 years ago. She was retired a few months ago. Her husband died several years ago.

Surviving are two sons, Valentine A. Luce, 3904 Calvert st. nw., and Charles F. Luce, 12 Parkside rd., Silver Spring; a sister, Sister Margarita of the Sisters of Charity at Nazareth, Ky., and three grandchildren.

Requiem mass will be said Saturday at 10 a. m. in St. Michael's Church, Silver Spring. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

A. T. Capehart

Washington, Ind., March 2 (AP).—A. T. Capehart, father of U. S. Senator Homer E. Capehart (R., Ind.), was stricken ill on a street in the business district today and died before the arrival of a doctor.

Coroner William attributed death to a heart attack.

Capeheart, a retired farmer, was 82 years old. He moved here several years ago after living most of his life in nearby Pike County.

S. W. Dempsey Dies; Former Congressman

Mr. Dempsey

Former Representative Stephen Wallace Dempsey (R., N. Y.), a lawyer in the District since 1931, died Tuesday in Georgetown Hospital. The 86-year-old former Congressmen had been ill about six months.

A native of Hartland, N. Y., Mr. Dempsey was graduated in 1880 from the De Veaux School, in Niagara Falls, N. Y.

After his admission to the New York bar in 1886, he practiced in Lockport, N. Y., then served as assistant United States attorney from 1889 to 1907, in western New York.

From 1907 to 1912 he served as special assistant to the United States Attorney General in New York, and was in charge of the successful prosecution of the Standard Oil Co., the New York Central Railroad and the Pennsylvania Railroad on charges of giving and accepting freight "rebates."

In 1915, he was elected to Congress from the Fortieth New York District. He was chairman of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee when he retired to private practice in 1931.

Mr. Dempsey was a member of the Army-Navy Club, the Chevy Chase Club here, and the National Republican Club of New York.

He leaves his wife, the former Laura Hoag, whom he married in 1889. She lives at the Mayflower Hotel. Two grandsons also survive, both the British Royal Navy: Lieut Wallace D. Mosely, RNDSO, in Malta, and Lieut. C. Sheridan Moseley, RN, stationed in Malta.

Dr. Otterback

Funeral services for Dr. Morgan Otterback, 69, of 513 Seward sq. se., dental surgeon here for many years, will be held Saturday at 11 a. m. at the Lee Funeral Home, 300 4th st. ne. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Dr. Otterback, a native of Fairfax County, Va., died Tuesday at his country home in California, St. Marys County, Md., after a long illness.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mamie A. Otterback; a daughter, Mrs. Jean O. Wilkerson; a sister, Miss Agnes C. Otterback, and a brother, Guy P. Otterback.

Dr. William Reid Blair

New York, March 2 (Spl.).—Dr. William Reid Blair, 74, who served 23 years as director and then director emeritus of the Bronx Zoo, died yesterday.

Under Dr. Blair's administration, the zoo built up one of the most varied collections of animals in the world. He was also credited with having sanctuaries set up for the European bison, and thus saving the species from extinction.

1000 Attend 8th Annual Course

Speakers Stress Rights At Voters' League School

By Nicha Soure

WHEN MRS. JOHN F. THOMAS "rang the school bell" at the eighth annual school of the District of Columbia League of Women Voters yesterday, approximately 1000 students were there to say "present."

An educator, a Senator, an economist a librarian, and a radio news analyst were the "professors" who led the discussion of democracy in the concentrated one-day course at the Statler Hotel.

Dr. Luther H. Evans, librarian of Congress, began the discussion of democracy by saying that the United States is not a true democratic country, either in the upper or lower case "D," since it is too large a Nation to have individual participation in government. But with the wider application of such principles as the Bill of Rights, the United States has become an "increasingly democratic country," he said.

While we enjoy certain basic rights of freedom, which the Government is powerless to take away, Dr. Evans declared, we tend to take these rights for granted.

"The Bill of Rights must be readjusted and examined," he said, to meet the changing status of our country. He condemned the South strongly for its stand on the Negro question.

A Southerner himself, Dr. Evans believes that "the basic sustenance of the discriminatory prejudice in the South is the feeling of insecurity and inferiority that grows from lack of economic security."

President Truman was praised by Dr. Evans for his "political courage" in his stand on Civil Rights, and the league members agreed with a hearty round of applause.

In Dr. Evans' opinion, the loyalty program is essential since no government can exist without the power to find the unfriendly elements within it.

Calls for Complete Suffrage

SENATOR PAUL H. DOUGLAS of Illinois used the phrase made famous by Abraham Lincoln as his definition of democracy: "A government of the people, by the people, for the people."

Again the league with a second round of applause, showed its approval when the Senator said. "Since democracy is a process as well as a goal, the residents of our voteless District suffer a personal loss in civic development by their lack of the franchise and all of the activity which that implies."

There are 17 million people in the United States of darker skins, the Senator said, who do not have complete suffrage, not only Negroes but the Mexicans and Indians as well. Beside this group, he continued, there is the white population which can't vote because of the poll tax and certain resident requirements which disqualify many voters.

Taking up another phase of democracy, Senator Douglas said it costs money to run for public office, usually from $10,000 to $30,000. He stated that in one campaign where his expenses were $10,000, his wife had contributed $4000 of it through household savings over a period of four years.

"How can you run unless you are a wealthy man," he asked. One way, he said, "answering his question, is to find a wealthy man, who is either an idealist, a goof or has sporting blood, to back your campaign.

The narrowing of the group who run for office to the lawyers was also deplored by Senator Douglas. "Preachers will estrange their congregations, teachers will depart from academic poise, and doctors are afraid of losing their clients, making the lawyers the only group who can take both parts of a question without losing face," he said.

Even Break in Education

TAKING stock of education in a democracy, Dr. Harold Benjamin said, "One-fourth of the rejections in the armed services during World War II were because of illiteracy."

These rejections came from States like Georgia, Alabama, Louisiana, Arkansas and Mississippi, who did not give an "even break" to all school children.

When a child is restricted from a school because of his race, color or economic status, the workings of a democracy are reduced, Dr. Benjamin explained. As an example, he said, in choosing a geographer you will get a more inferior individual if a choice must be made in a group of 500 rather than in a group of 5000 applicants.

The present citizens will make a stronger democracy, Dr. Benjamin said, because there are hundreds of thousands of students under the G. I. bill who would not have ordinarily gone to college.

Importance of Individual

CYRUS S. CHING, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, stressed the importance of an individual in a democracy, and asked that people analyze before they criticize."

"Each generation must pay its installment on the price of freedom," he said, and the success of democracy depends on the ability of each generation to adapt itself to the changing conditions.

Mr. Ching charged the educational systems with being at fault, since they teach students how successive generations killed each other, but give no course on how people should live together.

He pleaded with league members not to fall "into that great American indoor sport of name-calling" but to try for understanding of individuals instead.

Tolerance for Minorities

AFTER a "recess" for lunch, the local chapter members returned to the schoolroom to hear Joseph C. Harsch discuss democracy in the world today.

Mr. Harsch, after briefly giving the history of our democracy and its relation to the rest of the world, recommended fair and unemotional thinking with tolerance for the interests of the minorities in the solution of world problems. Mr. Harsch, Columbia Broadcasting System news analyst and commentator, stated that "time would solve some of our problems."

"If we keep our sights low," the radio commentator said, "and not think we are the saviours of the world, we can bring something better to the world than Russia can."

Mrs. E. V. Simrell presided over the morning session of the school while Mrs. Howard K. Hyde presided over the afternoon meeting. Mrs. Hyde summed up the democracy school with, "You and I are democracy. It is within your heart and can be practiced right in your own home as well as in Government."

Guest of honor at the afternoon session was Miss Anna Lord Straus, president of the National League of Women Voters, who urged league members to make "our own country a stronger representative of democracy."

SUMMING up the mornings "schooling" on democracy is Dr. Luther H. Evans, (standing), Librarian of Congress, who acted as chairman of the panel discussion at the League of Women Voters' meeting yesterday. Members of the panel (seated left to right), are Senator Paul H. Douglas of Illinois; Cyrus S. Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, and Dr. Harold Benjamin, dean of the college of education, University of Maryland

Rep. Bosone Calls on Schools to Curb Crime

Dullards Make Delinquents, She Says

By Genevieve Reynolds

Representative Reva Beck Bosone yesterday placed the burden of crime prevention largely on the shoulders of the Nation's school teachers. She issued her challenge to the profession at a luncheon meeting sponsored by the National Education Association in the Burlington Hotel.

"The majority of criminals have a slow mentality and drop out of school because they cannot keep up with the routine geared to the bright students," she explained. "They become embarrassed at their inability to learn, lose interest and begin to play truant. First they spend the day under the proverbial old bridge. Then they hang out in the homes of amoral married couples and later begin ganging up with other students of slow mentality."

While serving for 12 years as judge in Utah's Municipal Court, she asked each defendant brought before her, "How far through school did you go?"

Few Educated Wrongdoers

Results of the survey, she said, showed that the average criminal quits school between the sixth and eighth grades.

"I nearly fell off the bench when a high school graduate was brought before me," asserted Representative Bosone. "For, criminal high school graduates are rare in court."

Pointing out that she also had sat on benches in the courts of New York City, St. Louis and other large cities, she said that she found the same educational background were applicable to criminals in every State in the Union.

"From my own research and survey," observed Judge Bosone "I have concluded that the majority of criminals are of slow mentality. And truancy nearly always is a forerunner of criminality.

"If we could have caught the mentally slow before truancy age and kept them in school," she continued," we could have prevented most of the crimes.

Over and above the million dollar cost of the criminal are the trillions of distress and heartache he causes others, according to Judge Bosone, citing the fact that the boy or girl generally goes from truancy to petty crimes, from the juvenile courts to the big houses or penitentiaries.

The titian-haired former school teacher and judge scolded teachers for calling their slow students "dumbbells" or making them feel uncomfortable by comparing them to the bright ones. "I don't blame kids for leaving school," she emphasized. "I wouldn't want to be embarrassed either."

"To keep the mentally slow students in school and out of crime will call for originality and imagination on the part of teachers," she declared. "If many of the mentally slow had been caught by an imaginative teacher, I believe many of their crimes could have been averted."

Representative Bosone placed love of children as the prime requisite for a good teacher. "We could avert at least 60 per cent of the criminal load on society if every superintendent would make sure that his teachers love children before giving them a job," she averred.

Argentine Officers Entertained by Attache

COL. JOSE V. FERNANDEZ, Assistant Military Attache of the Argentine Embassy, and Senora de Fernandez entertained at dinner last evening in the Blue Room of the Shoreham Hotel for a group of officers of the Argentine Military Delegation to the Inter-American Defense Board.

The guests of honor at the delightful party were Gen. and Senora Aristobulo Reyes, who will leave Washington shortly for their native land. General Reyes has represented his country in Washington for several years as head of the Aeronautical Division of the Argentine Military Delegation to the Inter-American Defense Board.

The other guests last evening included Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Estanislao Lopez, Commodore and Mrs. Anibal Fervor and Col. and Mrs. Hector T. Terradas.

Opera Guild Benefit Plans Discussed at Tea

A TEA was given yesterday by Mrs. Gardner Luce, Mrs. Emilio Abello, wife of the Philippine Minister, and Mrs. Melquiades Gamboa, wife of the First Secretary of the Philippine Embassy, at which plans were discussed for the Opera Guild's benefit concert, to be given at the Philippine Embassy on March 26. BenJamin Tupas, pianist, will be among the artists giving the program. The tea was given at the American Newspaper Women's Club.

Mrs. Luce is chairman of the Opera Guild and Mrs. Abello and Mrs. Gamboa are cochairmen for the concert. Senora de la Colina, wife of the Mexican Ambassador, is chairman of invitations.

Patrons and patronesses are the Ambassador of the Philippines, Joaquin M. Elizalde; the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de la Colina, the Ambassador of Siam and Princess Wan Waithayakon, Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture.

About Removing Stains

In a newly constructed apartment dwelling several of the renters are "blessed" with badly marred and discolored bathtubs. Have tried bleach, several cleansing agents and good hard elbow grease to no avail. Is there any preparation on the market which will dislodge these ugly yellow stains? I have heard that practically all the tubs in this large unit are in the same condition, so I know your good advice can be used by many a weary

"Bathtub-Scrubbing Wife."

Since so many of the tubs in the development are causing trouble from discoloration, it seems entirely possible that the enamel in the fixtures is not of the acid-resisting type. On this type of enamel, the use of a household bleach tends to accentuate rather than correct the problem, for the action of the bleach roughens the surface. The best way to clean it would be to rub with a scratchless cleaning powder moistened with kerosene. Also, your difficulties might be lessened somewhat by always using a water softener in the bath water to prevent the formation of the brownish deposit on the tub. Washing the tub after each use before this deposit has a chance to harden should help, too.

I have some "Super Maid" heavy aluminum pans and detachable wooden handles which need replacing. This ware was sold in the South some 15 to 20 years ago through home demonstration dinners. Can someone tell me this Super Maid address? V. P.

According to the most recent information available at the Department of Commerce, "Super Maid" aluminum is being manufactured by the Advance Aluminum Castings Corp., 2720 W. 36th Pl., Chicago, Ill.

Recently P. B. asked about bringing shrunken blankets back to their origfnal length. There is a laundry in Virginia which will do that. P. B. can call Chestnut 0354. R. W. H.

The firm mentioned is a "woolery" which assures me they are successful in softening and restoring blankets to somewhat their original size if they are not badly shrunken or matted.

Will you tell me how I may stuff a pincushion (what substance to use?) J. H. W.

Probably the most available stuffing to use would be either cotton batting or absorbent cotton.

How and where does one go about getting barrels for use as packing boxes? M. C. P.

As a special service to their customers, barrels can sometimes be purchased from firms which specialize in packing and crating. One firm where they can be purchased can be reached by calling National 1070. If you can pick up the barrels at their place of business on New York ave., they will cost you approximately $2, with the head. If you will have to have them delivered, the charge will be slightly more, around $3 per. The same firm also sells excelsior, flex pack or shredded paper to make the entire job more convenient for you.

The plush lining on my almost-new leather jewelry box, which has a slightly musty odor, contains some substance to which I am very allergic. Every time I open the box I sneeze violently and, if I wear a necklace which has been kept in it, I develop all the symptoms of a cold. I have tried sunshine and fresh air and have also left charcoal pills in the box for long periods of time, but with little effect. Have you any other suggestions? E. W.

If you have any reason to believe the musty odor may be due to mildew, you can eliminate any further mildew growth by going over the interior with the liquid which is sold to rid fabrics of this fungus and odor. This is available where housewares are sold. My only other thought would be to go over the interior thoroughly with the smallbrush attachment of a vacuum sweeper to remove any dust particles or anything else of that nature from the lining. If this doesn't lessen your discomfort, then there is probably something in the actual materials in the box to which you are sensitive.

Can you tell me how to remove a mixture of mahogany furniture stain and turpentine from a white marquisette curtain? I have tried clear turpentine and bleach to no avail. D. R. Y.

Since bleach has already been applied to the stain, it is possible that nothing except further bleaching will remove it. However, you might try rubbing colorless vaseline or shortening into the stain, allowing it to remain on the stain to soften and then soaking in turpentine. If you see no improvement with this treatment, you could try one of the color removers as a bleach. These are sold where dyes are sold. Follow the directions which come with the product you buy.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Student-Husband of Working Wife Takes Lead In Calling Family's Hand, For Using Her as Sunday Cook; Now the Family Huffs at Both

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: While my husband is going to school, I am working as a bookkeeper, and we live in half of a two-family house owned by my invalid mother, who occupies the other half with her younger brother. She is a widow and he is a bachelor; and her only income is the rent she receives from the three of us.

Jim is in line for a good position when he finishes his schooling eight months from now. Then we want children and a home of our own eventually; but there are family complications—namely, mother and the wives of my two older brothers.

Every Sunday the "girls" visit mother, for lunch and supper, and send their unruly children to our apartment to play. I am mother's cook and housekeeper, with Jim's loyal help. I fix the company meals and Jim helps with the dishes. To mother it would be unthinkable to have her "guests" help in the kitchen.

Good natured Jim usually just grins at their jibes about his doing woman's work, but last weekend he said he was fed up with their pan-handling. He had me prepare lunch in our apartment, take mother and uncle their servings, and tell the girls there wasn't enough to share with them, and from now on they had better eat at home.

Also, Jim spoke up to say he wanted them to keep their children out of our apartment, because he was going to spank them thoroughly if he found them jumping on our furniture or snooping through our bureaus again. As he spoke we heard a crash. In a pillow fight with our sofa cushions, the children had broken a mirror.

Mother was horrified and burst into tears. The girls accused me of being unsympathetic and not wanting them to visit her. They stomped home with their offspring, and there followed a visit from my brothers, who said some hateful things about Jim's going to school and letting me support him. Now mother refuses to speak to us until we apologize to the girls. Uncle is neutral and merely tells us to live our own life as best we can. But where do we go from here? G. C.

We Lead Cheering Section for Hero

DEAR G. C.: Before tackling the question of where do you go from here, I wish to put myself on record as leading the cheering section for Jim—a real hero, may his tribe increase, who deserves a medal for honor, valor, horse sense and outstanding manliness.

Your long letter, here condensed, gives many sidelights on his decency. For instance, "Jim has always been kind and thoughtful of mother, and it seems to me he gets no thanks; but he says we should go on being kind to her, and in after-years we will have no regrets." Also, his helping with "laundry, cleaning, etc." despite your brothers' cracks about his doing "female chores." Jim has dignity, and compared to him your brothers are brats.

For advice, don't strain yourself trying to peer into the future or give final shape to future plans now. With Jim as your partner you can afford to relax and follow his lead, at his pace, I think. For it seems to me he is a born leader, with a long head, great heart and stout character; and that he has the toughness of spirit, once his mind is made up, to give memorable account of himself in blazing a road through difficulties. His handling of "the girls" proves that.

I say no, a thousand times no, to your mother's tricky theory that you owe the girls an apology. You don't. They've been exploiting you outrageously with her tacit consent, because her play has been to keep "in good" with the boys through them, using your cookery as bait to keep the girls on the string. And that being the ticket, you were entitled to balk and call their hand in precisely the way you did.

So if your mother "refuses to speak," serve her in benevolent silence, but don't cringe. Don't give an inch to her spoiled favorites, either; and when the time comes to renegotiate her support, put it up to the boys to help financially in providing a caretaker for mama—which is their duty as much as yours. M. H.

GOOD LOOKING luggage is essential to the woman who would travel in high style. But it should be practical as well as handsome. The Amelia Earhart pieces, pictured here, fill both requisites. Lightweight and spacious, they are covered in a Traveler's Cheque pattern of cotton canvas. Canvas is coated with pyroxolyn to protect it against wear, weather and many soap-and-water scrubbings. For Travel Without Travail

Pick Proper Luggage and Pack It Well

By Peggy Preston

GREATEST kill-joy of travel is this business of packing—selecting the right clothes and luggage. Many a trip has been ruined because we failed to pack the right clothes—in the right manner—into the right suitcase.

Air travel, with its restrictions on luggage poundage, is a further complication. But since we are living in a streamlined age, we might as well try to learn how to travel in it, as simply and easily as possible.

First, and most expensive item for consideration is luggage. It must be lightweight and sturdy. Then, if the pocketbook permits, it should be good looking, a possession to be proud of.

The three pieces of luggage in the accompanying picture are both handsome and practical. Designed primarily for air travel, they weigh only a few pounds and are covered with a washable cotton fabric. They come in 11-piece sets, ranging from a little "Train Case," to large pullman bags. From this set one can make a suitable choice of one or two pieces. Additional cases may be added, from time to time, until a good all-around luggage wardrobe in attained. Washington stores which carry the Amelia Earhart line are The Hecht Co., Woodward and Lothrop, and Becker's.

Basic Rules

Next on the agenda is the selection of clothes for your journey. This, of course, is determined by your destination and length of stay. But wherever you go there are a few basic rules to remember.

Take as few clothes as possible. Nothing can be more troublesome on a trip than too many garments, which need to be packed and unpacked at every stop. Stick to one color scheme, eliminating the need for more than one set of accessories. Avoid clothes or accessories that require constant washing or pressing.

Tina Leser, New York designer, applied these and other rules when she recently left on a round-the-world trip by air. She carried two suitcases and a hat box. In them were condensed an adequate wardrobe for all occasions and all climates.

For traveling she chose a green wool suit with matching topcoat. In a suitcase was an extra plaid skirt to match with the suit or coat; several blouses, one afternoon dress and one evening dress, completed her winter wardrobe.

For stops where summer weather prevailed, Miss Leser packed two cotton bathing suits, four cotton playdresses, two "town" cottons, a sundress with plaid cotton bolero jacket and an evening dress. A gabardine raincoat completed the list, fitting into both the summer and winter categories.

Miss Leser solved the hat problem by selecting two squash felts which pack easily and retain their shape.

Once your travel wardrobe has been selected, you will save yourself time and trouble, if you pack it properly.

Space-Saving Tricks

Start with cosmetics, putting them all into a separate container. Spilled perfume, or a leaky powder box can play havoc with clothes in a tightly packed suitcase. If you do not own a cosmetic case with a water-repellent lining, line a candy box with cotton. Use it to carry your cosmetics, and hope for the best.

If you are traveling with more than one suitcase, pack bulky things in one; reserve the larger case for lingerie and dresses.

Shoes, jewel boxes, etc., should go at the bottom of the case, carefully wrapped in tissue; lingerie, blouses and dresses on top, with plenty of tissue between the folds.

Space saving trick is to stuff hats with 'little things," such as stockings, panties, or T-shirts that can be worn without ironing.

Use lots of tissue paper. Keep heavy things on the bottom, and you will find that you rarely will need to use an iron.

Colorful Shoes for Spring

SHOES are going to be as colorful as a spring hat this year, judging by a new collection which has just arrived in Washington.

Middy blue, combined with rose; pink, yellow, green polka dots, and aqua. These are but a few of the colors included in the lively youthful collection of shoes which Earle Teschon has created for Customcraft Originals.

As interesting as the colors are the fabrics which Mr. Teschon recommends for late spring and summer wear. Sturdy linens, sometimes combined with calf or doeskin, are unusually attractive. Shantung, in every pastel shade in the rainbow, is used extensively and for evening satin is a reigning favorite.

If Mr. Teschon has his way, the closed shoe and single sole will vanish from women's wardrobes. For comfort's sake, as well as for beauty's, he believes in platform soles and shoes with open toes and heels.

"The over-all closed shoe does not make for good foot health," Mr. Teschon contended at the press showing of his collection at the Mayflower Hotel. "It does not allow the foot to breathe properly."

Shoes by Mr. Teschon are available locally at Windsor Footwear on Connecticut ave.

Dior Showing Reported 'SO,' Or 'Sold OUT'

Not SRO (standing room only), just SO—Sold Out. That's the latest word from ticket headquarters for the fashion show and luncheon to be held Saturday, March 5, in the Blue Room at the Shoreham Hotel. Christian Dior's first American collection will be shown and proceeds will be for the benefit of the "Fonds de Solidarite Universitaire de France."

Decorations, flags, the menu and the wine, donated by an importer, all will carry out the French theme. Additional attractions will be favors and prizes, including a Dior dress.

Late reservations include those of Senator and Mrs. Owen Brewster, the Minister of Iran and Mme. Noury-Esfandiary, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Randolph Huntington Minor, Mrs. Harold H. Burton, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mme. de Kauffmann, wife of the Ambassador of Denmark; Mme. Boheman, wife of the Ambassador of Sweden; the Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Hubert; Mme. Baube, wife of the Counselor of the French Embassy, and others prominent in official, diplomatic and social circles.

Shoreham "lobbyists" can watch from their favorite arm chairs the brilliant parade of distinguished guests—and perhaps the models as they make their entrances and exits.

Folks in Foggy Bottom See Walter Donnelly Sitting In a New and Bigger Office

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THERE'S CONSIDERABLE bustle around Foggy Bottom as the Hoover Commission's State Department revamping plan gets under way. When Congress stamps its final approval, there'll be four new Assistant Secretaries of State appointed to head as many geographic desks. Most certain appointee will be Walter Donnelly to hold down the Latin-American end. Donnelly, at present Ambassador to Venezuela, is one of our finest public servants. He gets on so well, is rated so highly by American businessmen with important Latin-American interests that he has been offered jobs paying in the $50,000-and-up bracket. As he has a flourishing family and little private fortune, turning down these opportunities indicates more than usual devotion to the country's service. Donnelly has a really remarkable working background which includes two years of newspaper work, summer courses at the University of Caracas, a stint in the Justice Department, commercial agent for the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Trade Commissionerships in Canada and Bogota (where he married a most charming Colombian girl), several years in Brazil during which he entered the Foreign Service, Counselor of Embassy for Economic Affairs in Panama and Peru, finally Ambassadorships in Costa Rica and Venezuela.

Son-in-Law of 'Sunny Jim'

SPEAKING of Assistant Secretaries of State, curious fact is that Ernest Gross, newly appointed for liaison with Congress, is a son-in-law of the late Senator "Sunny Jim" Watson of Indiana. Gross, a Rhodes scholar and as modest as he is able, has the job of clarifying and explaining State Department policy to Congress and is in charge of drafting all legislation submitted by the State Department to Congress. "Sunny Jim," rated as one of the "willful" men responsible for keeping the United States out of the League of Nations, was also one of the most enthusiastic boosters of the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act, which most experts believe was the prime economic cause of World War II. Urging its passage, the Senator said: "If you pass this act the economy of the United States will be booming in 60 days." Shortly after, the depression deepened even more! Senator Watson also authored the nifty "There comes a time when one has to put politics above principles."

Headlines on Legs

DORIS FLEESON, Washington's pretty, petite, political columnist recently returned from speechmaking down in "Geo-jah." Doris, who makes her living the serious way, wowed her Southern audience from an unexpected angle. The occasion was a round-table discussion sponsored by one of her syndicate papers, the Atlanta Journal.

Preceding speaker was a New York Times man who deplored the inactivity of today's political columnists, their lack of flair for interpretive reporting. Now, in journalistic jargon, the trotting around done by reporters is called "legwork." So when the Atlanta Journal's editor introduced Doris, he started off with a compliment, "Miss Fleeson's greatest asset is her legs—" He got no further, the audience roared its enthusiastic approval, and without benefit of further oratory, blushing Doris had to dip into her speech.

Marlene's Daughter

AT THE United States Steel Corp.'s Sunday night buffet supper preceding the performance of the Theater Guild of the Air, Marlene Dietrich's daughter was the outstanding beauty. Only a year or so ago, Maria Manton was a somewhat dumpy, mousy-haired young actress. Sunday night she was a striking second edition of her lovely mother. She was svelte, her hair the same Dietrich orangy-russet, her skin was startlingly blond. Miss Manton wore a supple black satin creation, cut down to HERE, with the skirt slit so the curious could determine whether or not she resembled mama from the knee down.

Miss Alice James to Be Bride

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen James of Linden, Silver Spring, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen Alice James, to Armin Henry Meyer, of Washington and Lincoln, Ill., son of the late Rev. and Mrs. Armin Henry Meyer.

The bride-elect is a graduate of the University of Maryland and is a member of Kappa Delta sorority and Pi Delta Epsilon honorary journalistic fraternity.

Mr. Meyer was graduated from Capital University, Columbus, Ohio, and later received a master of arts degree at Ohio State University. Former dean of men at Capital University, Mr. Meyer is now a foreign service officer on home assignment at the Department of State. He returned to this country last year after four years in Bagdad, where he was public affairs officer at the United States Embassy.

The wedding will take place in the spring.

Katzen—Cohen

The engagement of Miss Sally Rose Katzen to Harry L. Cohen is announced by her mother, Mrs. Sadie Katzen.

The bride-elect, the daughter of the late Jacob Katzen, is a graduate of Wilson Teacher's College. Mr. Cohen is the son of Mrs. Golde Cohen and the late Simon Cohen. He was graduated from Benjamin Franklin University and George Washington University Law School, and he is a veteran of 27 months service with the Army in Europe.

The wedding is to take place in early summer.

Herbst—Gallun

Mr. and Mrs. William Herbst of Washington announce the engagement of their daughter, Frieda, to Jack Gallun, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gallun, formerly of Wilkes-Barre, Pa. The Galluns now make their home in Washington.

In Hospital

Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie has canceled her social engagements for the next few weeks and is at George Washington University Hospital.

Tea Honors 81st Congress Club

There was no mistaken identity at the Eightieth Congress Club's tea, honoring members of the Eighty-first Congress Club yesterday. Each guest was given a card bearing her name and State as she entered the reception room in the United Nations Club.

Greeting the wives of the freshmen members of Congress were Mrs. Ralph Harvey, Mrs. Donald Jackson and Mrs. John Allen. In the receiving line were Mrs. James Davis of Georgia, newly elected president of the Eightieth Club and Mrs. Andrew J. Biemiller, president of the Eighty-first Club.

Mrs. Charles E. Potter, head of the arrangements committee, was assisted by a hospitality committee composed of Mrs. James P. Kem, Mrs. Raymond Baldwin, Mrs. Carroll Kearns and Mrs. Edward Miller.

Alternating at the tea and coffee urns were Mrs. John J. Sparkman, Mrs. Otto Passman, Mrs. Donald Nicholson, Mrs. Albert Carter, Mrs. William McCulloch, Mrs. Zales Ecton, Mrs. John W. Bricker, Mrs. Edward Thye, Mrs. Tollefson, Mrs. John J. Williams, Mrs. Monroe Redden, Mrs. Norris Poulson, Mrs. Carroll Kearns, Mrs. Russell Mack, Mrs. Walter Rielman and Mrs. Wint Smith.

To Florida

Mrs. Constantine de Stackelberg has left for Florida to spend two weeks convalescing from a recent illness.

Lunch Can Pack a Punch, Without Excess Calories

By Ida Jean Kain

THE Lunch-Bucket-Brigadiers are asking for a slimming lunch . . . but one they can look forward to eating.

Fair enough—but we're going to start with a good breakfast. No breakfast makes lunch fattening! I know, many a working girl regards breakfast as a total waste of calories, and thinks she is off to a slim start for the day by skipping breakfast. That's all wrong. Breakfast is needed after a 10 or 12 hour fast. Don't overlook the important, scientific fact that calories are burned on energy demands of the body. You may think that by taking just coffee the energy demands will be directed to the stored fat, but what happens is that you shift into low gear . . . and low efficiency.

Be sure to include some protein at breakfast. On toast and jelly and coffee, energy will not hold over. That carbohydrate meal throws sugar into an empty stomach, the sugar gets into the blood quickly and is used up fast. When the blood sugar drops, energy drops with it. An adequate breakfast can prevent that mid-morning slump. Good nutrition pays.

Breakfast need not be high in calories. Have a citrus fruit or juice, an egg, two thin slices of whole wheat toast, lightly buttered, and coffee. A balanced breakfast will keep you from wanting to overeat at lunch.

THE way to pack a lunch that is not too high in calories is to take only one sandwich, but carry along some extra protein . . . an ounce of yellow cheese, a hard cooked egg, a couple of extra slices of luncheon meat or, if you're lucky, a chicken leg. For variety, devil the egg, using mustard and seasoning; take different kinds of cheese, or carry a slice of homemade meat loaf.

De-fatten the sandwich by spreading butter lightly . . . soft butter spreads farther . . . and by using mustard or boiled dressing made with skim milk, instead of mayonnaise. Take along something chewy, such as celery, raw carrot slivers, pickle slices or radishes, or a tomato. Do not take any cake, pastry or doughnuts—instead have fresh fruit, grapes or a tangerine, an apple, a pear, or a banana. Vary the fruit from day to day.

If possible have something hot . . . this makes lunch more satisfying. A cup of hot tea, or a bouillon, or soup made with skim milk is filling and comforting without adding many calories.

Plan a good, low-calorie lunch . . . within 450 calories. This will be slimming, yet will prevent a mid-afternoon fadeout.

To keep from being too hungry at dinner, have a glass of buttermilk or milk, orange juice or a cup of tea, in the late afternoon.

The Family Scrapbook

'Covering Up' for the Youngsters

Children can be untidy! There's no denying that. The woman who wants to be a good housekeeper and an understanding mother at the same time has a pretty difficult job.

Here's one suggestion that may help carry out these often-conflicting desires. Save the old newspapers and get in the habit of spreading a number of thicknesses on the floor beneath the table or easel where children are working with clay, paint, wood, or other materials that bring them so much satisfaction.

If you want to try something a little more permanent in the way of protecting the floors and other parts of the room, a big tarpaulin of heavy canvas is most serviceable. Today there are still a good many of these available in army surplus stores and they aren't too expensive. If one gets in the habit of "covering up" in this way, the worry that children will be spoiling things is lightened and there isn't the driving urge to keep after them to be careful.

It'll Cost Money

Mutation Mink May Turn Up Pink

Seattle, Mar. 2 (U.P.).—Blue blood does not mean a thing in a mink. It's blue fur that puts a family of mink up among the socially select.

In the Northwest, where fur breeding is a 26 million dollar annual business, buyers for 300 fur garment manufacturers scattered from Paris to St. Louis, gather once a year for a mutation mink sale. The dark brown pelts which once represented the acme of mink perfection don't get a look-in.

The mutations are the pelts taken from freak animals whose blood lines have been contantly interwoven until a standard color strain is established. At the Seattle sale the various copyrighted brands of freak mink command prices that would give an honest brown mink or the average husband heart failure.

It Runs Into Money

The original "Silverblu" mink coat appeared on the market in December, 1942. It was snapped up for $18,000. The first all-white mink creation sold for around $25,000. In Canada, one mink rancher has produced a litter of seven Palomino or golden yellow mink that couldn't be bought alive for a figure spiced with less than three commas.

Seattle put itself on the map as a mutation mink center in 1945. That was the year royal pastel was offered to the waiting world.

Fur buyers figured the odds in favor of the average blonde wanting one of the honey-colored coats, and happily put up an average of $172 per skin.

Experiments in mutation mink breeding began in Wisconsin in 1931. Today there are literally dozens of commercial brands of blue mink. It would take either a color expert or a poet to decide which is the bluest.

Aleutian Blue, Too

To the unpracticed eye, "silverblu" looks to be about the color and texture of cigarette smoke. The other brands can be classed as lighter or darker smoke—ranging from steam to smudge pot.

The year 1949 will mark another milestone in blue mink history, too. A limited quantity of the fabulous "Aleutian Blue" strain will be offered at a New York auction on February 28. The remarkable thing about "Aleut," as the experts fondly refer to it, is that it's all blue from its long guard hairs down to the roots of its wispy "underfur."

But before you rush out to find a mink blend to match the lady's new dress, consider that the average coat takes 80 skins. The top auction price for each skin is around $60 today. By the time each pelt finds its way into a coat, its retail value has risen fourfold. Add the tax and figure it out.

Dish Rack and Dryer

Many women use the self-drying method of dishes by placing them in a rack after washing and pouring boiling water over them and then allow them to dry by themselves. Almost all women who employ this method let the dishes remain in that rack for hours and not only do they give the kitchen a disorderly appearance but they collect dust on the dishes. If you use this method, put them away as soon as they are dry.

Carmelizing Sugar

To carmelize sugar, put it in a skillet over low heat and stir it constantly until it melts and is a golden brown color.

Portraits

By James J. Metcalfe

I long to hold you

There are a thousand things, my dear . . . I want to say to you . . . And if I said each one of them . . . I still would not be through . . . Because there are no words to tell . . . How much you mean to me . . . And why I want to cherish you . . . For all eternity . . . You are an angel on this earth . . . If ever one was here . . . With wings that spread unending joy . . . And everlasting cheer . . . I treasure you with all my heart . . . In every thought and dream . . . When there is sunlight in the sky . . . Or silver stars that gleam . . . I long to hold and comfort you . . . With all your golden charms . . . And never let you leave my lips . . . Or wander from my arms.

National Weather Summary

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Bill Takes Stand Before The Bar, Pleads For Women's Rights

Patrick W. Duffy, business agent of the local Bartenders Union, says that men should be permitted to drink standing up at bars, but not women.

It is not very gallant of Mr. Duffy to advocate such rank discrimination. Stand-up drinking serves as a check against over-indulgence. Its benefits should not be denied on the basis of sex.

When a standing drinker has had enough, he knows it. If he takes too much, he can no longer stand.

Besides, it's more important to keep women sober. They get so shrill when they get tanked that they drive male patrons to order additional rounds, solely for their analgesic effect.

I think that if the girls want to put their feet up on the rail and horn in on pub discussions of television fights, Kozar's batting average, or the third babe from the left in the Gayety chorus line—that's their business. Their uncivil rights should be guaranteed.

All I ask is that they pay for their own and keep their cigarette ashes out of my beer.

NO RED TAPE

I see that a fellow grabbed $824 from a local bank teller's cage, and departed in great haste.

Probably didn't have time to fill out a formal loan application.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Two friendly, female part-police pups, 6 weeks old; they come from a long line of farm dogs." (Union 7021.)

PERSONAL NOTES

Paul Anderson, 6522 5th st. nw.; H. H. Dow, 600 Easley st., Silver Spring, Md.; and R. A. Bernazzani, U. S. Naval Air Station, Patuxent River, Md.: The item about the C's on Capital's Constitution was confusing—but correct. The Navy has an airplane called the Constitution. Capital Airlines has a flight with that name, just as various airlines and railroads call flights and trains by such names as Diplomat, Executive, Congressional, etc.

C. G. Stamm, 602 Lawrence st. ne.: Yes, the cab company is supposed to be identified on the edge of the zone map, and the zone map is supposed to be on display in the rear seat of each cab. All I wish is that I had a dollar for each cab which isn't identified in that manner.

LEAP YEAR TOLL

Remember my story last year about the Squirrel Cage?

It's the cooperative house at 1841 Summit pl. nw. where 14 bachelors faced the dangers of Leap Year with composure and resolution.

Al Mapou now reports that there were three casualties during the course of the year, but that the remaining 11 bachelors came through with flying colors. (Presumably, they will now be safe from predatory females until 1952.)

The handsomest bachelor of all is still Michael M. McGillicuddy, the congenial canine who serves as both pet and master of the house.

Mike had laryngitis a few weeks ago. He's all right again now, but he had to spend some time at the animal hospital, soaking up some penicillin.

"As a matter of fact," says Al, "for a while there, he was as sick as a dog."

PSYCHOLOGICAL CURE

I've chills and a fever, I'm really quite ill;
My back aches, my head hurts, my throat is so sore;
It's strange how my symptoms will all disappear
The moment the doctor just knocks at my door.

ONE OVER PAR

Our recent item about the village idiot who drew his targets after he was finished shooting brings a companion-piece from That Fisher Feller (G. A. Fisher of 1442 Spring rd. nw.).

District Liner Fisher recalls the time a city guy came down into the hills to do a bit of hunting.

He brought about $600 worth of fancy equipment with him, but never bagged a thing.

One day he saw Fisher's "Cousin Clis" saunter by with a dozen cottontails slung across his shoulders. The dude's eyes bulged, and he said:

"My, you certainly had a fine day, didn't you?" Cousin Clis spat thoughtfully into the road and replied:

"Naw, I had to waste two rocks on that big one."

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air, Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—In an elevator at the Waldorf-Astoria, Henry Luce met King Peter of Yugoslavia and said: "We're expecting you for lunch at our office." The Time-Life-Fortune editors frequently have visiting dignitaries attend their editorial lunches. King Peter nodded, somewhat blankly, and said: "Of course, of course" . . . The next day King Peter's equerry telephoned Luce's office to inquire about the luncheon date Luce had mentioned. Luce's secretary checked, and discovered that the Peter with whom the editors had made the appointment was Prince Peter of Greece and not King Peter of Yugoslavia . . . A luncheon date mimediately was arranged—and that's how the King came to lunch at Time.

George Jean Nathan and Sir Cedric Hardwicke were in the Stork Club yesterday discussing actors they had seen drunk onstage. Hardwicke told of G. P. Huntley, the British actor, who once confessed that he tried to learn what it would be like to take several powerful drinks just before a performance. This was in Manchester on the evening of May 6, 1910. And when Huntley walked on stage, it seemed to him that the theater was rocking and the audience swimming. Huntley mused: "Well, at last I know—I just can't go on." He collapsed into a chair, and the curtain came down. And in front of the curtain stepped the theater's management with the announcement: "The management regrets that it must terminate this performance, because of the death tonight of His Majesty, King Edward VII."

Vice President Barkley was in Los Angeles a few days, too, to make the Jackson Day speech. He told Democratic Leader George Luckey about his first political speech, in Paducah, Ky. His old headmaster was in the audience, and Barkley asked him what he thought of the speech. "There were three things wrong with it," said the headmaster. "(1) You read it from a script. (2) You read it badly and (3) It wasn't worth reading."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Phone's Role in Truman 'S. O. B.'

By Drew Pearson

It's funny how, when you make a promise to your wife, something always happens so you can't keep it.

Pearson

Last week while riding home from California, I made a lot of promises first to myself, and later to the little woman, about spending more time at home, seeing more of my family, and taking a good rest on the farm. I had had enough of international good will, I told myself. And after I got caught up with a big pile of mail and wrote letters to the heads of the railroads, and a raft of Governors, mayors and other folks who had been extremely nice, I would take Mrs. P. away for the little rest we'd always talked about but somehow never seemed to manage.

So, filled with all these good thoughts, I got home and began to put them into operation right away. Mrs. P. looked dubious at first, but then she almost began to believe me. For I did a very revolutionary thing. I turned off the telephone.

Of course, I didn't turn off the phone in the kitchen—and I'm not quite sure whether this was by accident or by design. With the phone turned off upstairs, you can still barely hear the phone in the kitchen, but since it sounds faint and far away I am a little braver about not answering it.

Harry Truman Speaks

Well, anyway, having turned off the phone, I began to tell Mrs. P. how I had reformed, wasn't going to work so hard and how we would go away for a little trip. We even began to figure out where we were going.

Everything was lovely, and we even had one solid uninterrupted hour together, when suddenly the telephone in the kitchen began to ring. I was very brave. I ignored it. It rang and rang, but it didn't faze me at all. I just pretended not to hear.

Finally the phone stopped, but about 30 minutes later it rang again. Though it was way off in the kitchen, nevertheless it had a certain air of persistency. Finally I could resist no longer. I picked up the receiver.

The United Press was calling to tell me that President Truman had sounded off at a dinner at the Reserve Officers Association, calling me an S. O. B. They wanted my comment.

I told them I was spending a quiet evening with my wife, and that if Harry Truman wanted to spend his evenings away from his wife making speeches about other people that was his privilege. I didn't see why I should comment.

But, said the United Press, other speakers at the dinner specifically mentioned you, and the President's remarks definitely were directed at you.

So, in a weak moment, I commented.

The Telephone Continues

Then I remembered that other long, persistent telephone ring; so, since the fat was in the fire, I called up the Associated Press. "We've just been trying to get you," they said, "but you were out."

"Oh," I replied.

Since I'm supposed to be a tough, thick-skinned newspaperman I didn't tell them that I was sitting at home listening to their ring and trying to be brave enough not to answer it.

After that the phone just kept right on ringing, and has kept on ringing every day since. I haven't written all those letters thanking the folks who were nice to me, and I haven't taken the vacation with Mrs. P. In fact, I'm a little surprised that she's still speaking to me.

"Of course," I was mean enough to tell her, "it's all your fault. You elected him. You were the one who was rooting for him. And if he disrupts our evening and our vacation, then it's your fault, not mine. After all, you were the one who put him in the White House."

When I was a youngster I had a prof named Edwin Tomlinson who used to hand out a lot of advice which I didn't pay much attention to then, but which has proved valuable since. One thing he advised was: "If someone hands you a lemon, make it into lemonade."

That's what I'd like to do with the lemon President Truman handed me the other night. I don't see any reason why the initials "S. O. B." should necessarily stand for what Mr. Truman meant them to mean. The meaning of any word is what's in people's minds. Some English words are fighting terms in England though they have an innocent meaning here.

So words and their abbreviations are all a matter of education, custom and general usage. And I am sure Mr. Truman is a good enough sport to join me in putting a new interpretation on the initials "S. O. B."—which can much better mean "Servants of Brotherhood."

When Harry Truman was a farm boy driving mules in Missouri, I don't doubt that he needed some pretty strong language. I have never driven mules in Missouri, but I had 100 Missouri mules and 100 Albanian mule-drivers under my command in Yugoslavia once; and since the Albanians couldn't understand Missourian and the mules couldn't understand Albanian, and since the Serbian corporal couldn't understand either, I had to act as interpreter.

So, along with Harry Truman, I am familiar with mule drivers' language.

However, neither Harry nor I are mule drivers any more. We have graduated, I hope, to bigger and better things. Therefore, I am getting up an engraved "Servants of Brotherhood" membership certificate, and perhaps some other folks will join me in picking out people in their neighborhood or any place else who have really sacrificed for their fellow men.
